Non-Arrival of the Baltic.

SANDY HOOK, Thursday, April 5—10 o'clock P. M.

The weather is very thick and raining steadily. There is no appearance of the Baltic and we think it wholly impossible that she will be heard of to-night. We have a small steamer lying off the lightship waiting for the Baltic, and should she arrive there to-night, her news will be despatched to the City by telegraph or otherwise.

Spanish Affairs.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, April 5.

The views of the Spanish Minister of State have been entirely perverted by translating the Spanish word "Cuba" into continent, instead of coast. Correct that, and it follows that Spain has no idea of abolishing Slavery in Cuba. The Spanish paper, the Press, interprets to Cuba on the subject.

It is now said that TAYLOR'S forgeries will not amount to over $5,000.

The weather here is warm, and it has been raining gently all day.

Transatlantic Telegraph.

HALIFAX, Thursday, April 5.

The Provincial Parliament has been prorogued. The application of the New-York and Newfoundland Telegraph Company for a charter to enable them to build a competing line of telegraph through this province, was not acted upon, the mover having ascertained that nearly every member of Parliament was opposed to the project—the Provincial Telegraph Company being willing to grant the Newfoundland Company every reasonable and proper facility for the despatch of such business as they may bring to the Nova Scotia lines, which intersect every part of the province from Sydney to Yarmouth.

Previous to the adjournment of the Legislature, an important charter was granted to Mr. CHARLES ARCHIBALD, Messrs. BERRY, and their associates of London, which is designed to facilitate the construction of a Trans-Atlantic Electro-Telegraph, to connect the wires of the Nova Scotia Company with a submarine cable from Ireland. We understand that the capital necessary for this gigantic enterprise is already subscribed, and that the work will be pressed forward with all possible expedition. The projectors entertain no doubt of complete success, and expect to open a direct and instantaneous communication between Europe and New-York on or before the Fall of 1856.

The New-Jersey Legislature.

TRENTON (N. J.,) Thursday, April 5.

The House passed to-day over the Governor's veto the following Bank bills: Freehold, Woodbury, Raritan and Perth Amboy Banks—all by a three-fifths vote. They are all new charters. The Hunterdon Bank is a change from the general to the special law.

The joint meeting came off. Commissioners were appointed for every county. There was no election for State Treasurer and State Prison Keeper. The factions could not unite on both offices, although the Democrats were some six or eight in the minority. A resolution was carried to adjourn without day. Concurrent resolutions then passed to adjourn both houses sine die to-morrow. The old State Treasurer and Keeper of State Prison will hold over.

The Legislative Committee and the Roxbury Catholic Seminary—Weather, &c.

BOSTON, Thursday, April 5.

The Know-Nothings in Confusion at Lancaster.

LANCASTER, Pa., Thursday, April 5.

The Grand State Council of the Know-Nothings, which met here on Tuesday, broke up in great confusion this afternoon. The cause of the difficulty was said to be the opposition which was manifested towards open organization, and on account of public opinion running counter to secrecy and oath-bound conspiracies. Messrs. CAMERON, JOHNSON and Gen. IRWIN left this morning in disgust.

Additional Charges and Proof.

From the Boston Advertiser, April 5.

The Committee of Inquiry appointed by the Legislature are very diffidry about their work. They were appointed, if we understand rightly, to clear up certain charges and imputations against the fair fame of the State and the credit of its legislators. A prima facie case has been made out; and until the charges are investigated, the State and the legislators rest under ignominy. Meanwhile with the exception of sending us the letter and receiving the answer promptly returned the same day, both of which will be found in another column, we are not aware that the Committee have done anything. There has certainly been no public session, nor had we heard of the summoning of any witnesses. Until last evening, after this article had been placed in the hands of the printer, we were ourselves cited to appear before the Committee on Saturday next, a week after their appointment.)

What the Committee are to do or how to do we have our own conjectures for the double purpose of insuring correct end of satisfying the anxiety of the public with regard to the facts. The last, we might say the only, public evidence with regard to the proceedings of the gentlemen at Roxbury, is obviously to be obtained from the minutes of the house which they visited. The evidence of these ladies is vastly more pertinent than that of the visitors, who are interested parties, and ought not in strictness to be allowed to testify, even if their own testimony was less damning against themselves than were their admissions in the debate in the Legislature, and in the columns of the organ of the dominant party, their apologist and defender. If the Committee of Inquiry really wished to know what happened, it would seem that they should call on this have omitted to ascertain from the ladies at Roxbury.

This, which the Committee have not seen fit to do, we have done, although we do not possess the privilege of the plenary authority "to send for persons and papers" which the Committee enjoy. We have taken the pains to ascertain directly from these ladies—whose testimony must be regarded as conclusive—the facts of the case; and are able to state, on their authority, that with the exception of a few unimportant details—which we shall proceed to mention—the whole of our statement of Saturday was precisely correct.

We stated that no part of the house escaped the vigilant search of the visitors. We repeat that this statement is correct. Notwithstanding what the Bee says on the subject, the cellar was visited. It is true that the proffered lantern was declined—but one of the gentlemen (probably thinking the offer was a pretext to gain time) pushed boldly down a dark and dismal cellar-staircase, which if it existed in Boston might give occasion for one of Mayor SMITH'S remarkable verdicts. We ought to say that there was a single clothes-press in the house which was not opened by the Committee. It was locked, and the superior did not happen to have the key at hand at the moment when the party about her reached it in their course. She was about to procure it, but some of the gentlemen (by this time we suppose convinced of the folly of expecting to find hidden enormities in the closets) said that it would be unnecessary. Several of the party, nevertheless, rattled the door with an amusing incredulity. We are glad to be able to solve their doubts and remove their fears. We can inform them and the public that that clothes-press has since been opened in the presence of a Protestant gentleman from the City of Boston, and proved to contain nothing but clean linen, neatly arranged upon the shelves. This statement will doubtless bring inexpressible relief to several gentlemen. There is a sink in the lower part of the building where foul water is poured away, to be conducted to the drain. This sink is covered with a lid, as is not unusual in houses where neatness and cleanliness prevail. Several of the visitors in their march lifted up this lid, looking with suspicious eyes, we suppose, to find some immured nun. We must do them the justice to say that they generally closed it speedily.

We proceed to point out the particulars in which the witnesses are unwilling to sustain our statement, not because they are at all essential, but in order that our readers and the public may understand how close has been the scrutiny to which our article has been subjected, and how conscientious and careful are the witnesses:

1. The article spoke of the school as "kept by seven ladies, Catholic Sisters of Charity, members of the order of Notre Dame." The words "Sisters of Charity" should have been omitted, as there is a technical inaccuracy in applying that term to the Sisters of Notre Dame.

2. The four words "with their hats on" should have been omitted in describing the visit to the Chapel. The visitors were uncovered, there and elsewhere, in the presence of the ladies.

3. The article should have stated that "the ladies' dresses hanging in their wardrobes were" inspected, and not "looked over."

4. The persons to whom particular remarks were addressed were not stated with absolute precision in the article; but no remarks were mentioned that were not made, and others might have been added. The question "Whether there were any boys in the establishment?" was addressed, and repeated several times, to the lady-superior. The sisters all wear a badge suspended about the waist, with beads, a crucifix, &c. It was this, worn by one of the sisters, not the superior, which was handled, and not a "rosary suspended about her neck."

This completes the catalogue of the points in which our article falls of support. We are quite willing to qualify our statement by the concession of these points, as obviously immaterial; and we now state explicitly, then with this qualification, our article of Saturday is precisely correct, as is distinctly testified by the ladies at Roxbury, whose testimony would be conclusive in the strictest Court of Justice, and will not less readily command assent before the more liberal tribunal of public opinion. If it were worth while to attempt to add anything to the force of this correction, we might support it by an affidavit sworn to before a Justice of the Peace.

Here then is the evidence, pertinent and conclusive, easily obtainable, which the Committee of Inquiry have neglected.

This much with regard to the truth of the statements which we have already made; but as we intimated on Tuesday, there is a new feature in the scene, which we omitted to describe, and to which we now ask the reader's attention.

In a small chamber in the house, one of the boarders, a young lady whose parents we believe reside in the island of Cuba, but who is herself an American by birth, speaking English perfectly—lay in her bed ill. During the day the sister-superior had been applying leeches to this sufferer; and the disagreeable operation was scarcely concluded, when the attendants drove up and the numerous party alighted. The advent of this committee had caused great terror in the school-room; the children literally returned with frights. The superior's first care was to partly clean and calm their fears; and next, considering what effect this noise and the unexpected arrival must have upon her young patient up stairs, the superior proceeded to her chamber, and bid her not be frightened; warned her that she might be disturbed, and advised her to appear to be asleep.

On receiving the party in the parlor below, the sister-superior informed them that one of her pupils was ill, lying dead in her chamber, and requested them to make as little noise as possible in approaching that part of the house. We need not tell our readers how gentlemen of ordinary refinement and dignity would have behaved in such a case; our business is to tell what these visitors did. On reaching the chamber where the girl lay, the superior stated the fact. Did the "gentlemen" shrink back? No, they pressed forward. One, it is believed, actually entered the room; and, at all events, several approached within twelve inches of the bedside. The chamber is scarcely larger than a closet; the bedstead is a small iron structure, and is placed close to the door—so that the inquisitors, without actually crossing the threshold, could carry their presence into its privacy. What were the feelings of that weak and suffering girl as these rude men hung over her, we shall not attempt to describe. They were not destined to be left undisturbed by the ordinary decorum. She saw two men's heads peering into the room by another door, which was open at the foot of the bed. To obtain this view these two "gentlemen" must have leaned over another bed, which stands across the open doorway in an adjoining room. We trust their curiosity was gratified.

There is no doubt whatever of the facts about this matter. We heard them first, indirectly, from one of the supernumerary visitors. We have since made inquiry, and we have unquestionable and direct evidence. Further than this, we have seen the young lady herself, a girl of true spirit, who has recovered from her illness, apply reproved her friends and her spirit, and we have heard from her own lips the simple story of her wrongs. Nobody could look in the frank, open face of that young girl, as timid and blushing but with entire self-possession she answered the questions put her, and doubt one word of the story—and he must be possessed of an obtuseness of which we trust the legislators have the monopoly in Massachusetts, not to burn with indignation to think that such things are not only said but have actually happened. For ourselves we confess that we were half shocked of the tale we had under taken; infinitely more shocked—when we found ourselves only hearing the brief tale of what those men did.

Is there a mother in Massachusetts who can read this recital without a shudder, recollecting that the Legislature possesses precisely as much (and precisely as little) power to authorize such an invasion of her daughter's sick-chamber, in any house in the State? But we are ashamed to place the disgrace of the affair to the account of want of authority. Where was the courtesy, where was the decency, where was the humanity of these men? Suppose the illness of the girl had been more critical than it was—suppose the superior had not been able to warn her of the approach of the band of inquisitors—who will answer for the result or defend the proceeding? Truly, now at least, and in Massachusetts, "The age of chivalry is gone." A modern BURKE might even utter a more bitter complaint. Chivalry has gone, and decency, and humanity.

NEW-YORK CITY.

POLICE DEPARTMENT.

The New Police Bill—Correspondence Between Mr. Gerard and Mayor Wood.

We have received copies of a correspondence which has just passed between JAMES W. GERARD and Mayor WOOD, in reference to the New Police Bill.

Mayor WOOD's letter is as follows:

MAYOR WOOD TO MR. GERARD.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, Thursday, April 5, 1855.

DEAR SIR: Your esteemed favor of the 4th inst. is received. I cannot conceive that anything in my Messages to the Common Council, which have been referred to, can be construed into an approval of either of the propositions made at Albany, this Winter, to amend the present law relating to the Police of this City. It is true that in both the inaugural and recommendatory messages, allusion is made to the present police system, as defective; but it is as plainly and distinctly set forth, as well as can be, that the defects lay in the restriction of the powers of the Mayor, as the head of the Police Department, and in the separation of the power of the purse from the power of the proposition now before the Senate. In the first of these documents this position is plainly asserted, when I say, "though ostensibly head of the Police Department, he is not so practically, in the essential elements of authority, that of controlling the retention or removal of his own subordinates. The Chief of Police holds his place independent of the Mayor, that officer having been appointed during "good behavior," by the late Mayor and Board of Commissioners, under the law of 1853, which they construed to give that authority. He cannot, raise, appoint or remove the humblest subordinate in the service, nor make the rules and regulations for its governance. Of these requisites of power, so necessary to make an efficient police corps, he is by law deprived. Discipline can only be obtained and maintained by the firm hand of unrestricted power; besides, it is wrong in principle, to make any public officer responsible for the acts of subordinates, who are placed beyond his individual power to remove."

Here is a complaint of the want of power of the Mayor over the police, for which he should not be held to account with the conduct of the Police, and hence should govern it—that two Commissioners who can outvote him and control the appointments and removals should not be placed beside him to manage it. To leave no doubt as to these being my views then, as now, I quote again from the recommendatory message of January 11, 1855:

"This department of the City Government is placed more directly under the personal supervision of the Mayor than others; and, in assuming its direction, with the restricted power as to appointment and removal, of which, after all, constitute the great elements of control, I feel much responsibility and concern. My colleagues and I are carrying out the idea that there should be but one head and one power of appointment and removal, and that the two Judges, who now form part of the Board of Commissioners, should be taken away, and leave all to the Mayor, the following passage occurs:

"I am confident the judiciary is not the proper authority for determining police matters, nor are its members qualified, either by habits of life or train of reflection, to make good Commissioners. The bench and the service would each be benefited by a separation. My colleagues on the present Police Board fully concur in these opinions."

The whole theory of my views of Executive Government of every character, so far as this City is concerned, is one head. I am satisfied no good Government can exist in a city like this containing so many thousands of the turbulent, the vicious, and the indolent, without a Chief Officer with necessary power to see to the faithful execution of the laws, for the protection of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. No inconsiderable portion of our population think that Republicanism consists in the absence of law and Government.

The bill now before the Senate proposes to create three Commissioners, who with the Mayor ex officio, are to form a Board, who are to possess all the powers now held by the present Board. The Commissioners are to be elected by the people for the exclusive purpose of making and unmaking policemen. Now, though opposed to dividing the power of the Mayor over the Police, with any other officers, still if the principle is to be tolerated, better that high Judicial officers who are elected judges, and whose duties as Commissioners are incident to their duties upon the bench, should be his associates, than men who will be chosen for the purpose under the primary election system now in vogue. Great is the difference between Police Commissioners taken from high judicial positions, and Police Commissioners made by the tools of party reeking from the stews of sin and iniquity which at present have so much influence over party machinery. How far the lives and property and the order and decency of the people of this city will be protected under a Board emanating from a source of this character, there can be no difficulty in divining. The Senate's proposition is to lessen my power over the Police, whereas I have asked for its increase. My message cannot be construed into any other position. I never used any other language. Instead of giving to the Mayor that strength, which a full exercise of the duties of Chief Magistrate of this City should possess, and without which there cannot be the necessary vigor and independence, it is proposed by this bill to take away power, to decentralize it, instead of concentrating it to him, by placing three active politicians alongside of him to annoy and worry him into a compliance with their party behests. It is not too much to add that the Department would soon be filled with men chosen for partisan services and not personal fitness, and the power that placed them in office, would protect them against the Mayor afterwards. Not only is the election of Police Commissioners as such exclusively for this duty objectionable; but the mode of the election under this bill is yet more so.

It provides that after the expiration of the terms of those named in the act, there are to be chosen two at every election, by taking the two candidates who receive the highest number of votes in the same manner as the Governor of the Almshouse are selected. The alleged ground for this mode is, to secure a balance of partisan interest in the Board, because as it is said each party will be sure to elect a man, and hence parties will be divided. Now, even admitting that such would be its effect,—which it will not, as there are at least four political parties in this City,—and of course to do this it would be necessary to elect four Commissioners. Yet the theory of the mode is wrong, inasmuch as it secures the election of a Commissioner, who has been selected by the people. The second highest would be really and in fact dissatisfied, as unfit to be associated with the important and delicate duties devolving upon the office. It is proposed to take this repudiated candidate and give him a seat at a Board with as full powers as the Mayor himself, and, in fact, to control the action of the Board itself, even the Mayor, even against his efforts to protect the City,—it may be from the very interests this Commissioner represents.

Suppose the gamblers, lottery men, and houses of prostitution, combine to elect Police Commissioners; who can say that if not successful in electing both, they would not at least secure the second highest, and consequently force upon us an agent to secure the protection of their peculiar interests? Another no less serious objection is the massing of Executive Officers in a bill by the Legislature. This is a clear encroachment upon the Executive by the Legislative branch. The government of this State is separated into the Judicial, Legislative, and Executive. These divisions are defined in the Constitution, not only of New-York, but of the United States, as well as every State in the Union. One branch has no Constitutional right to interfere with either of the others. The Legislature, in my judgment, can have no legal authority to perform Executive duties, any more than it can Judicial duties. And let me say, that if the liberties of this country are ever destroyed, it will be by Legislative encroachment, and not by Judicial or Executive tyranny. In our own State, the Legislature at Albany brings with it dread and alarm wherever it commences. For years the property of individuals and the rights of municipal corporations have been trampled upon in its path. Total disregard has been shown to vested rights, and every other safeguard which in former times could procure protection, and no field has been the battle-ground, as there is now pendent a bill to overhaul a recent decision of the Supreme Court, indeed, the very foundation of Government have sunk into a more inferior condition, from which regard is had to the Legislature, always with exceptions of the moral application of which. The people living not in this City, but every other section of the State removed far from the Capitol, that is subjected to this wrong. If the City of New-York, within four hours of Albany, and in hourly communication, suffers so much from these legislative frauds, how is it with the agricultural and manufacturing interests in the interior, which in some cases are removed far from the danger, and without means to be continually informed of its approach. This bill names persons to do executive duty. If this can be, why not abolish our courts and name commissions as boards of referees to act instead? Why not in short give up all to the two houses of the Legislature, and permit them to absorb the other branches of government which by the constitution are placed independent of the law-making power, as the law-making power is of them. By reference to my message, you will see this evil more fully exposed.

These and other reasons which time will not permit a reference to, will prevent my giving support to this Senate proposition. I am against it in all its length and breadth, and though concurring in some of the provisions of the amendments to the Charter proposed, I would reject the whole rather than appear to recognize the fatal principles declared, affecting our Police system.

In reply to what is stated of my political proclivities, and the assertion that I am using, or intend to use, the Police for personal or partisan purposes, it is scarcely necessary to allude. The position I hold in public estimation is not the result of party machinery. As a Magistrate and Chief Magistrate of this City, I know no party, and recognize no political obligations. The principles which govern my administration are not in keeping with the practices of any party of the day, whatever may be their professions before election. And, though claiming no originality of ideas, yet the practical application of principles of government so long professed, but never practiced, is a novel procedure in a public officer, and puzzles the leaders wonderfully. Hence I am at no loss to divine why partisan designs should be attributed to me, by men who cannot understand that popular applause can be obtained in any other way, than by political trickery or the Machinery of the demagogue. I understand my own position fully. Without egotism, permit me to say that I am fully conscious of a place in public esteem far beyond and above any party, and to add the belief that if a candidate for the office of Mayor to-morrow, the people would not desert me if every political organization in the City were to combine in opposition. Therefore, it is necessary for me to act the part of the mere politician, and by prostituting the whole Police Department to political purposes, to hazard this position? Can any party make me so swerve from duty and a proper sense of personal security, as to throw away the good opinion of nearly all my fellow citizens, whose support is worth having? This can never be! The same principles and acts which have gone me the support of the people, will have power to me in the future, as they have done in the three of my administration. On this I have no fear. The danger to the public lies not in any relaxation or dereliction upon my part, nor in any improper use of the police, but in the passage of this bill. The police has been the main instrument by which I have been enabled to perform the acts which have secured public approval. Take it away, and the horrors of bad Government will return upon me four-fold, and it will be difficult then to combat the assertion which will be made that as head of the Department, (although stripped of the power) I have been derelict and have deviated from the present policy. It is unfortunate to add that some such charge has been influenced the projectors of this scheme! That its authors suppose that whilst the people will continue to hold me to a strict accountability for the maintenance of the forms initiated and sustained, would at the same time forget that the means by which they have been effected were taken away, and thus demand a continuation of reform, after all power of enforcing them had ceased. This opinion of the intelligence of the people, though not very flattering, is consistent with the motives which have evidently dictated this measure.

The warmth of expression of this letter may offend—my language may appear as if concealing some anxiement, which is not the fact. It is true I feel deeply these efforts to deprive me of the means by which any improvement in our City is effected. No man but myself can appreciate the critical state of our social condition, if the authorities are deprived of control of the only means of preventing dangers of far more serious character than have ever before threatened us. I am no alarmist, but believe me sincere when I tell you that in my opinion New-York can only be saved from a rule of corruption engendered by the devotees of the three great vices, viz.: Intemperance, Gaming and Debauchery, first by the strong one-man power, who, with a bold and fearless hand, can command the entire police force without hindrance or molestation. My many pressing duties have not permitted me time to do justice to this subject. This letter is hastily written, and full of imperfections, but without reference to its style or matter, receive it in the honest protest of your friend and fellow-citizen.

FERNANDO WOOD.

OYSTERS.

The New-York Oyster Trade.

The Committee on Public Health of the Board of Councilmen met on Wednesday afternoon in the Councilmen's Chamber, to hear arguments relative to the Ordinance of 1820, prohibiting the sale of oysters during the month of May, June, July and August. A large number of oyster dealers and others interested in the sale and consumption of oysters were present.

The Committee announcing that they were ready to hear any statement of facts bearing upon the matter in question, ex-Recorder TALLMADGE stated that he had been solicited by a majority of the oyster dealers of the City to urge in their behalf before the Committee the repeal of the ordinance of 1820, proscribing the sale of oysters during the Summer months. As the readiest and most intelligible mode, however, of getting at the facts of the case, he would call upon a few of the oldest and largest oyster dealers of the City who were present, and in connection with the Committee, examine them upon such points deemed most directly connected with the question at issue.

Mr. HOUSEMAN was first called, and in response to the various interrogations proposed, stated that he had been engaged in the oyster business over thirty years. For the past twenty-five years New-York City, he said, had been supplied mainly with oysters from Virginia. Previous to this, the City obtained its supply from beds in its vicinity. The oysters native here generally spawn in May.

The Virginia oysters spawn during all the months of the year. The York River—or Virginia oysters, are as good to eat in the Summer months as in other months. All the Virginia oysters are not transplanted. The general time of transplanting them is in March and April. By putting it off later, the oysters are often lost. He lost last year a boat load of 5,000 bushels by such delay. He had never been to Virginia personally, and could not state as to the positive condition of the oyster in the bed. He thought he could judge pretty decisively by seeing them after they come here, as they come here in so short a time.

Mr. RUCKMAN, being called, said he had been engaged some thirty years in the oyster trade. He had been engaged largely in bringing oysters from Virginia to New-York. In the latter part of April the weather was too warm to allow them to be brought here. Previous to this time, in cool weather, oysters will keep five or six weeks. In the latter period they will keep but a day or two. If a ready market is not found for them they have to transplant them, which they do, in water, some nine or ten feet in depth.

Milky oysters he did not regard as being unhealthy, but they were unsalable. There are nearly eight hundred persons in New-York who import oysters from Virginia. Two hundred vessels are employed in the trade. In Virginia ten thousand are engaged in supplying the New-York market. Shifting the oysters from Virginia to our water here has a purifying effect. The Southern oysters are the lowest priced in the market. The growth of the vicinity of New-York would not begin to supply the demand.

Mr. DEGEN, a retired oyster dealer, said he had been engaged in the oyster trade over fifty years. The native oyster spawns generally in July, some in August, depending upon the warmth or coolness of the season. It also depends upon the depth of water they are placed in. Oysters are brought here from Virginia in March and April. These do not usually spawn at all. Being transplanted they acquire fatness and become fat and palatable. The effect of the Northern Winter they cannot stand, but lose their vitality. It makes some difference what kind and the depth of water they are taken from in Virginia before being brought here. When oysters have for any reason are replanted, it is better to change the place of planting. Southern oysters that are winnowed become so, to speak naturalized, and are like the native oyster. In conclusion he stated that he had taken great pains in his calling and can speak positively from his long experience in the business. He could not consent to act as judge of the status that had been given of the oyster. In view of his experience and knowledge, he would unqualifiedly state that Virginia oysters were perfectly healthy during the Summer months.

Mr. THOMPSON was next called—about nine-tenth of the oysters consumed here were transplanted from Virginia. He did not know of the sale of natural or native oysters in the City during the Summer months. Virginia oysters be consumed healthy in Summer. In other respects Mr. THOMPSON corroborated Mr. RUCKMAN'S statement.

Mr. RUCKMAN being recalled and interrogated upon the point of the sale of native oysters in the City, gave it as his opinion that during the entire Summer not one cart-load was sold in all. It was as easy, he stated, to distinguish the native from a transplanted oyster as to distinguish oysters from olives.

Mr. CHANDLER briefly stating his experience in the oyster trade, and corroborated the statements of those preceding, as to the period of the oyster's spawning and transplanting, &c.

Mr. JOHN THOMPSON made a few remarks, the substance of which he alluded to the panic that some time since arose as to the healthfulness of oysters in the warmer months, characterizing it as only the result of entire ignorance. The oyster, the transplanted oyster particularly, he challenged it to be shown to be unhealthy. The most learned chemists, in the stomachs of those alleged to have died from eating oysters, had been unable to trace anything showing the oyster as the direct agent of disease. He hoped the Committee would do their duty, not to the public alone, but to the oyster dealers and their interests. Duty to both was free and unrestricted trade.

Mr. TALLMADGE followed with a speech of some length, summing up the statements that had been submitted to the Committee. The question brought to their view was a difficult and delicate one. The extent of the oyster trade in the City made it a question of no small magnitude. He then read a statement of the amount of oysters sold in Clinton Market during the years 1853 and 1854. During 1853 the aggregate amount of sales were $666,000. In 1854 they were $614,000.

This was a statement he said of only a single market, and that a minor one. Add to this the sale of the other markets with the immense supply necessary for the interior State market, and the oyster trade it would be seen was enormous, involving a yearly capital of over five millions of dollars. He next alluded to the ordinance, which it was the desire of the oyster dealers of the City to have annulled. The ordinance was passed in 1820. The various provisions of it he proceeded to review at length, and showed that when the law of oyster found its way in the market, that was no reason why the whole trade should be prohibited. As well, because sometimes there were sold in market the flesh of calves of premature birth, or other meat rendered putrid and unwholesome for any season, you might cut off the entire trade in meat. But as the law meets such special cases, so if unhealthy oysters are sold, it was only necessary to enact a law meeting such cases. He alleged that the reasons inducing to the adoption of the ordinance in question were now done away with. He was proceeding to enforce further reasons why said ordinance should be repealed, when the Chairman announced that the Committee must withdraw, as the hour had arrived for the meeting of the Board of Councilmen.

The Committee adjourned sine die.

THE "VESICULARS."

The Street-Cleaning Machines.

A communication was received in the Board of Aldermen last evening, from the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps, in reply to a resolution of inquiry in relation to the authority by which a contract had been made with the proprietors of the street-cleaning machines for cleaning the First, Second, Fourth and Sixth Wards, and that the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps be directed to keep the streets in the above Wards properly cleaned at the expense of the contractors, by the employment of persons who are residents of the City.

The subject was finally referred to the Committee on Cleaning Streets.

How People will be Stupid.

It is a matter of great surprise that people will persist in doing ridiculous things; which, manifestly, they should not do. Scarcely a day passes that the City Press do not contain accounts of "shameful "mock auction" and "patent safe" swindles, perpetrated on inquisitive gentlemen visitors from the rural districts. It would naturally be considered that the publicity given to these impositions would be sufficient to prevent their repetition, by deterring parties from visiting suspicious places, where beautiful gold watches are constantly "going" at a "great sacrifice;" or to be too ready to make the acquaintance of every insinuating scamp whom they chance to meet; or too eager to accept an invitation to visit the Elysian Fields to inspect a new and wonderful "patent safe." The flags of the mock-auctioneers do not wave in vain; and the "safe" speculators drive a flourishing and increasing business. The Mayor has put a partial stop to this; but it is only partial as yet.

And then, there is another piece of stupidity to be talked of. For weeks past the public have been notified, by advertisements, by editorials, by posters profusely distributed, that on and after the first of April, in accordance with enactment, all ungrepaid letters would be sent directly to the Dead Letter office, and not to the persons to whom they were addressed. Such notice, so publicly and repeatedly given one would suppose to be sufficient to prevent the deposit of a single ungrepaid letter. But not so. We hear from sundry quarters that on the day on which the law went into operation, several hundreds of ungrepaid letters were deposited in the various City offices, and that every day since, the number so deposited has not much diminished.

The clamorous of the parties who are victimized by mock-auction and patent-safe proprietors, may be accounted for by supposing them guilty of never reading the papers. But how account for the carelessness of those who write letters to be sent to the Dead Letter office?

It is very evident that all the stupid people are not dead yet.

The regular weekly meeting of the Commissioners of Emigration was held at the room of the Commissary, Castle Garden, on Wednesday, present Commissioners VANDERPOEL, President, in the Chair.

After the transaction of the regular weekly business, the monthly bill of emigrants relative to the number who have arrived during the month, was presented and ordered to be sent to the Legislature of Albany, through the Emigrant Commission.

Commissioner KEARNEY thought the bill recently introduced by Mr. SPRAGUE an unnecessary and a tyrannous one.

Commissioner KELLY had been to Albany nearly every week since the 1st of January, and he had seen no bill or parts of a bill relating to the Emigrant Commission of which he could approve.

The other members of the Board concurred with Messrs. KELLY and KEARNEY, and it was resolved to take immediate action to inform the Legislature of the views of the Board touching the bills relating to the Commission now before that body.

Commissioner CHAUNCEY informed the Board that the Venezuelan Consul at this port had made overtures to him for the transportation to Venezuela of the German emigrants recently arrived here by the Gripsholm Due George. He had made no final agreement with the Consul in the matter, but the subject was still in negotiation.

The British Recruits and Neutralizing Enlistments.

District Attorney McKEON had an entire engagement on Wednesday night in relation to the supposed violation of the neutrality laws by certain agents of Great Britain, &c., &c. The steamship State of Maine was lying at Pier No. 3 North River with a number of Italian hanging round her decks, when Mr. McKEON made his appearance among the passengers, and looking around, discovered a passenger who had been accused of enlisting men to go to Canada, and also a group of men and boys whom he suspected had been induced to enter into the movement. One of these suspicious persons was a Frenchman and another was a German; a third might have been an Irishman, but the fourth was certainly a Cockney. These suspicious-looking persons gave evasive replies to leading questions. The District Attorney said then he knew all about the object of their expedition, and that they were going to make war against the despotism of Russia, and that they had better go ashore at once, and not wait until the United States Marshal should come down and take them into custody. The Frenchman took his carpet bag and left; the Dutchman sha

In all cases if the District Attorney shall appear and prosecute the appeal, the costs, if any, shall go to him for his individual use, in other cases to the complainant, for his individual use, in the payment of the whole, or any part thereof, the defendant may be committed to the same extent as provided in the fourth section of this act.

SEC. 5. Whenever complaint on oath or affirmation shall be made in writing, to any magistrate by any credible person, resident of the county where the complaint is made, or of an adjoining county, that he or they have reason to believe, and do believe, that intoxicating liquor is stored or kept in violation of any provision of this act, whether the person on keeping or depositing the same is or is not known to the complainant, in some specified place or house within the city or town in which such complaint is made, or upon any vessel within such limits, or within five miles thereof, and the place or vessel where such liquor is stored, or the place where such belief is founded, or such facts and circumstances shall be stated upon oath or affirmation of some other person, it shall be the duty of such magistrate, if he is satisfied that there is probable cause for said belief, forthwith to issue a warrant, directed to the same manner as criminal process, commanding the officer with proper assistance, forthwith diligently to search such place or vessel, and to seize all intoxicating liquor found therein, which from said complaint or other proof furnished, said magistrate shall be satisfied there is probable cause for believing it is kept or deposited in violation of any provision of section first, together with the vessel in which the same is contained, and to arrest the person in charge thereof, or in whose possession the same is found, to be dealt with according to the provisions of this act. But no warrant shall be issued under this act to search any such dwelling-house as is described in section first of this act, unless the occupant thereof shall have been convicted, or have taken out a license provided, or having said intoxicating liquor in his dwelling-house, be satisfied it is to be done, within one year next preceding the issuing thereof. Every warrant issued shall particularly describe the place to be searched, and the things to be seized.

SEC. 7. Whenever any liquor shall be seized under any provisions of this act, it shall be the duty of the officer by whom such seizure is made, except in cases where the owner thereof shall have been arrested, forthwith to give written notice to the owner or his agent, if known, of the seizure of such liquors, which, and the vessels containing the same, shall be described in such notice, as near as may be, and of the name of the magistrate by whom the warrant was issued, or in case of seizure under section twelfth, before whom the person arrested was carried, and the name and residence of such officer making such seizure, and the time of such seizure. Such notice shall be served by delivering it to the owner or his agent, personally, or by leaving the same at his last or usual place of residence, with a person of mature age residing on the premises, or the owner or his agent cannot be found, and his place of residence is not known to the officer, such notice shall be served by delivering the same to any person of mature age, residing, or being employed in the place in which such liquor was contained, or, if none such can be found, by posting the same in a conspicuous place, upon the outer door of such place, and copies of such notice, containing also a description of the place in which such liquor was found, shall be forthwith conspicuously posted in at least three public places within said city or town. Any person may, at any time before forfeiture, present to the magistrate named in such notice, an affidavit or affirmation in writing, stating that such liquor, at the time of such seizure, was actually owned by him, or by some other person named by him, for whom he is an agent; or he or such person had just become possessed thereof for the purpose of preventing its forfeiture, and that the same had not been kept contrary to the provisions of this act, to the best of his knowledge and belief, and also specifying the purpose for which, the place where, under which exception of section first the same was kept, and the facts particularly showing it to be within the exception; and thereupon the same proceedings before such magistrate, shall in all respects be had, as are provided in section fifth. Upon the trial of such claim, the Custom-House certificates of importation, and proofs of marks on the casks or packages, corresponding thereto, shall not be received as sufficient evidence that the liquors contained in said casks or packages are those actually imported therein. The magistrate shall keep minutes of the proceedings, testimony and judgment upon all trials under this or section fifth, which shall be subscribed by him. He shall have power to issue process to compel the attendance of witnesses, and to punish for their attendance as witnesses or jurors, in the same manner as in civil actions before justices of the peace.

SEC. 8. Either the complainant or other person prosecuting in behalf of the people or defendant, may appeal to the Supreme Court at general term, from any judgment of any magistrate rendered under any provision of this act, by serving upon such magistrate, and the complainant or such other person, or the defendant, as the case may be, written notice thereof, specifying the grounds of appeal, within ten days after the rendering of such judgment, the service to be made as now provided in appeals from justices' courts in civil actions. The decision of the Supreme Court shall be final, unless with the decision one of the judges thereof shall file a certificate, that a legal question is involved therein, upon which it is proper to take the opinion of the Court of Appeals; in which case an appeal may may be taken to the Court of Appeals. The service of such notice shall be of no effect in behalf of the defendant or complainant, unless he shall at the same time deliver to the magistrate an undertaking to the people of the State of New-York, in the sum of five hundred dollars, with one or more sureties, to be approved by such magistrate or county judge, conditioned that, if the judgment be affirmed on such appeal, or upon a subsequent appeal from the decision of the Supreme Court to the Court of Appeals, they will pay the amount of the fine and costs contained in such judgment, and that the defendant shall not, during the pendency of said appeal, violate any provision of this act, and that they will jointly and severally pay all fines, damages and costs which may be adjudged against him, in consequence of any such violation; and in case such defendant shall be required by such judgment to be imprisoned, or to stand committed, with the further condition that he will appear in the Court of General Sessions of said county, at the term thereof next after the affirmance of such judgment, and not depart therefrom without leave, and obey and abide by the order of such Court of General Sessions, as to such imprisonment or commitment. Upon the giving of such notice and undertaking, all further proceedings upon such judgment shall be stayed, until such appeal shall have been tested, or dismissed for want of prosecution, as hereinafter provided. No proceeding, or judgment had or rendered under any provision of this act, shall be set aside or be void by reason of any technical error or defects not affecting the merits; but the same may be amended without notice before or after judgment, or upon appeal or review, or after judgment reversed upon appeal or review, when by such amendment substantial justice will be promoted. Any judgment or verdict rendered under any provision of this act against evidence, may be reversed upon appeal, as in civil actions. All appeals from judgments under this act shall have the same precedence as other criminal causes, and may be moved out of their order at any time by either party.

SEC. 9. Whenever any appeal shall be taken according to the provisions of the last section, it shall be the duty of the magistrate, within ten days thereafter, to file a return of the testimony and proceedings had before him upon the trial of such action, together with the notice of appeal and undertaking, if any, and his certificate that the same contains all the testimony and proceedings had before him on such trial, in the office of the county clerk of the county in which the trial was had. After the filing of the papers as aforesaid, the same rules and proceedings shall in all respects govern the appeal to the final determination thereof, as to amending the return of said magistrate, as are now provided in civil actions, except as hereinbefore modified; provided nevertheless, if either the complainant or defendant cannot be found to be served with notice as now provided, the same may be served by filing it with the county clerk and attaching thereunto an affidavit containing the reasons for so doing. If the complainant, other than some one of the officers whose duty it is made to enter complaint, shall fail to appear and defend or prosecute any appeal brought under any provision of this act, or to apply to the District Attorney as provided in section fifth, he shall be personally liable to the defendant for the costs of the said defendant, to be recovered in a civil action. All exceptions issued upon the final determination of any appeal adversely to the defendant, to collect the judgment thereon, shall be in the name of the people of the State of New-York against the property and person. If any execution so issued shall be returned unsatisfied, in whole or in part, the District Attorney may, and he is hereby authorized to bring an action upon such undertaking, in the name of the people of the State of New-York, and recover therein the amount of such judgment and costs.

SEC. 10. Whenever any liquor seized under any provision of this act, shall not be adjudged forfeited, the officer having the same in custody shall return it to the place where it was seized; but when it shall be adjudged forfeited, as provided in any section of this act, or whenever any trial shall have resulted adversely to the defendant, and the time for serving notice of appeal shall have elapsed and no notice and undertaking shall have been served, or the judgment appealed from shall have been finally decided adversely to the defendant, and notice thereof given to the magistrate before whom the trial was had, it shall be the duty of such magistrate forthwith to issue a warrant commanding that the liquor so seized and forfeited be destroyed. And the officer to whom the same shall be delivered, shall forthwith proceed in the presence of such of the complainants, or some other person to be designated in such warrant, and to be summoned by him to execute the same, and such person shall join with the officer in making return by affidavit, of the time, place and manner of the execution of such warrant, and upon the receipt of said return, said magistrate shall order execution to issue to said officer, who shall proceed to sell the vessels which contained said liquor; and the proceeds of said sale shall be applied in like manner as provided by this act in other cases.

SEC. 11. Whenever complaint on oath or affirmation in writing, which complaint shall state the facts and circumstances upon which his belief is founded, shall be made before any magistrate, by any person, that he has just cause to suspect and believe, and does believe, that any offence against any provision of this act, has been committed, and that some other person or persons named by him, has or have knowledge of the commission of such offence, and that such persons or persons has or have violated the provisions of this act, in the time and place of the commission of such offence, together with the vessels in which the same is contained, and facts which to convey such person before any magistrate of the same city or town, to be dealt with according to law, and to make the same and vessels so seized in other respects be disposed of as herein provided. It shall be the duty of every officer to whom any warrant shall be delivered by such magistrate, to execute the same, and to arrest the person or persons named therein, and bring such person before such magistrate, or in case of the absence or inability of such magistrate, before some other magistrate of the county, to be dealt with according to law. If upon such examination, it shall appear that any such offence has been committed within the jurisdiction of such magistrate, it shall be his duty to issue a warrant for the arrest of the offender, and the search of his premises, as hereinbefore provided. If it shall appear that any such offence has been committed out of his precinct, or beyond the jurisdiction of such magistrate, it shall be the duty of every such officer, whenever he shall see or have information of any such offence, to arrest the person or persons suspected to be guilty thereof, and to take him before some magistrate, and if said magistrate shall, after due examination, deem him too much intoxicated to be examined, or to answer upon oath correctly, he shall direct said officer to keep him in some jail, lock-up, or other safe and convenient place, to be designated by said magistrate, until he shall become sufficiently sober to be examined, and then shall cause the same to be forthwith forthwith to take him before the said magistrate, or if he cannot be found, before some other magistrate, and whenever any person shall be brought before any magistrate, as provided in this or the preceding section, it shall be the duty of such magistrate to administer to such person an oath or affirmation, and to examine him as to the cause of such intoxication, and for the purpose of ascertaining whether any offence has been committed against any provisions of this act. If upon such examination, it shall appear that any such offence has been committed,

NEW-YORK CITY.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Resolutions against the Renewal of the Harlem Navigation Company.

The regular meeting of this body for the current month was held yesterday (Thursday) in the Directors' Room of the Merchants' Bank, Mr. PELATIAH PERIT in the Chair.

Mr. THOS. HYDE was chosen Secretary pro tem.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The following gentlemen were then balloted for as members, and elected unanimously: Messrs. WATTS SHERMAN, W. E. DUNCAN, N. D. CARLISLE, JAMES DEBAUCHAT, and F. A. MUNGER.

Mr. A. LEARY was chosen, without dissent, to fill the place on the Arbitration Committee vacated by the retirement of Mr. H. OSBORN.

Mr. BARSTOW, for the Committee appointed to procure suitable apartments for the future use of the body, made a report recommending a large room in No. 102 Pearl-street, over the Counter and Exchange office, and two doors from Wall, which could be hired for five years at $600 a year.

The report was adopted unanimously.

The CHAIRMAN inquired if any gentleman could state the position in which the Chamber of Commerce stood with regard to the use by chart of the room in which they now hold their meetings.

Mr. PERLEE replied that in a recent conversation with Mr. PALMER, that gentleman had expressed his entire willingness that the Chamber of Commerce should continue their meetings in the apartment in which they now sat—and as a further expression of his good will towards that body, that he would buy a new carpet for the room when the present one was worn out. (Laughter.)

Mr. BARSTOW moved formally that a Committee be appointed to make arrangements for the renting and occupation of the room recommended in the report by the members of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. PERLEE MILLS thought it would be advisable to postpone the subject until a future meeting. It required consideration.

Mr. PERLEE rather agreed with the last gentleman; he thought the growing importance of the body demanded that they should erect a building in a modern style for their own use, part of which might be advantageously let.

Mr. MILLS did not regard it as improbable that at no very distant day the Chamber of Commerce, which was unquestionably becoming one of the most influential Corporations in New-York, would have a Bank in this City under the style of the "Bank of the Chamber of Commerce."

The Chairman was of opinion that perhaps the renting of a room adjacent to that now occupied by them, for the preservation of their documents and papers, and a continuance of their meetings in the apartment so kindly furnished them by the Directors of the Merchants' Bank, would meet the views of a majority of the members.

Mr. BARSTOW was glad to find that the idea of the erection of a building by the Chamber for its own purposes received so general favor, and if a Committee were appointed to carry out the project, he should withdraw his motion.

A member asked the term for which the room in the Courier and Enquirer Office could be rented.

Mr. BARSTOW—We can have it for either five years or three.

MEMBER—Then I would move as an amendment that it be taken for three years.

Mr. BARSTOW accepted the amendment.

Mr. MILLS was still of opinion that it would be well to lay the matter over for further consideration. He agreed to the suggestion of the President for the hiring of a room for the present, in which to deposit the books and other property of the body.

Mr. CURTIS, one of the Committee appointed to inquire into the advisability of procuring new apartments for the body, but who had not signed the report presented by Mr. BARSTOW, did not perceive the necessity of having a room open from one to five in the morning until night, for the accommodation of the Chamber of Commerce. The members were men of business, and could seldom avail themselves of such a privilege. Besides, the inconvenience of having their rooms in the same building with a newspaper, and in having other parties, as it would seem from the report, occupying those rooms simultaneously, was too obvious to require argument. It was for those reasons he had refused to sign the report.

The question on the adoption of Mr. BARSTOW's motion was then put, and negatived by a large majority.

The CHAIRMAN inquired as to the situation of the Usury bill.

Mr. BARSTOW replied that there was a certainty that it would pass the House, at least; but he knew nothing of it, save that.

CHAIRMAN—It has been well attended to!

Mr. BARSTOW—Yes, Sir; it has been well attended to.

Mr. WALTER B. JONES referred to the bill now before the Legislature, to incorporate a Harlem Navigation Company, and moved for the resolution that it was a monopoly, calculated for mischief, and intended to benefit merely the parties immediately interested in it, and not the public nor the commercial community. He submitted the annexed resolutions:

Resolved, That a Committee of three be appointed to draft a remonstrance against the bill entitled "An Act to incorporate the Harlem Navigation Company, which will progress a tonnage duty on vessels passing through said Canal.

Resolved, That the remonstrance and the proceedings in this Chamber be transmitted to His Excellency Myron H. CLARK, Governor of the State of New-York, with the request that he will immediately transmit the same by a special message to both Houses of the Legislature of the State, now in session.

Resolved, That the proceedings of the Chamber be printed, and copies transmitted officially to the President of the United States, to the Governors of the several States, and the respective Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade in the various cities in the United States.

The Chairman suggested that it might be more judicious to present petitions directly to the two branches of the Legislature.

Mr. PERLEE thought it would be a departure from precedent to send these remonstrances to the Governor without first submitting the matter to a Special Committee, and receiving their report thereon. He moved an amendment to that effect.

A member asked when the Legislature would adjourn.

Mr. JONES—Their pay expires on the 19th, and it is hardly probable they will sit much longer than that. (Laughter.)

The Chairman said the better way to decide the question would be to take the sense of the meeting on the amendment in the first place.

Mr. JONES—I don't object to the amendment. I accept it.

Mr. CURTIS asked if it would not be too late to submit the remonstrance to the Legislature after the Committee had reported upon it. If anything effective was to be done in the matter, there was no time to be lost.

Mr. MERRIAM had just returned from Albany, and understood that the session would be prolonged for a week beyond the 19th. There was a very strong opposition manifested to the passage of the bill, and the people of Buffalo, particularly, were exerting themselves actively to influence its defeat.

A special meeting of the Chamber might be called for an emergency, he thought, and the matter settled.

Mr. HYDE was convinced that the object of this remonstrance was perfectly understood, and needed no elaborate argumentation.

Mr. JONES—The position in which the bill stands demands early action. It has been reported back to the Legislature as complete by the Committee to which it was referred, and may be carried through at any moment. Had it not been for the prompt and earnest opposition of some gentlemen at Albany, it would have become law ere this.

The CHAIRMAN—Then I will put Mr. PERLEE's amendment, in order to settle the matter.

The amendment was then put and lost.

The original resolutions were then put to the meeting and adopted unanimously.

Messrs. JONES, CURTIS and BARSTOW were appointed a Committee to carry out the purposes of the resolutions.

Communications from the Board of Trade at Buffalo, in favor of taxing Railroads, a letter from Mr. MERRIAM accompanied by a copy of the New Harbor Improvement bill, and the proceedings of the Assembly of New-Jersey on the subject of Harbor Encroachments from Governor PRICE, were announced by the Chairman as having been received, but no action was taken in reference to them.

After the nomination of several gentlemen as new members, the meeting adjourned.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Meeting of the Fire Department Committee.

The Committee on Fire Department (Board of Aldermen) met on Wednesday evening. Present—Aldermen Howard, Chairman; Aldermen Trowbridge and Bistel, and Alfred Carson, Esq., Chief Engineer.

HOSE COMPANY NO. 30 AGAINST HOSE COMPANY NO. 17.

The complaint against Hose Company No. 17 was that the Foreman of the Company refused to permit No. 30 to have a hydrant which they were entitled to, on the 23d of March, 1854. The Foreman of Hose No. 30 substantiated the complaint.

The Foreman of No. 17, in answer to the charge, said he was standing in front of the hydrant at the time, and No. 30 arrived there first, but that there was only about five feet distance between the two apparatus, and the apparatus being so near he thought they had a right to the hydrant.

The Foreman of No. 30 denied that there was only five feet distance between the two carriages. He said they were fifty feet apart.

Alderman Howard—Well the principle is the same.

The Committee decided to suspend the Foreman of No. 17 for two months.

HOSE COMPANY NO. 37 AGAINST HOSE COMPANY NO. 17.

No. 37 complained of No. 17 for two assaults made on the afternoon of Sunday, Jan. 4, while proceeding to a fire in the Fifth District, on the corner of Rivington-street and the Bowery, the second assault was made on Monday morning, March 20, 1854, in Essex-street, between Eighth and Ninth-streets.

Joseph Kelly, the Foreman, corroborated the complaint made by the first complaint.

Samuel Sherwood was sworn and testified as follows: He said that he was injured by being knocked down and stunned by some men belonging to No. 17, and that his Company made a portion of a "laying" for No. 37, on every alarm of fire.

Cornelius N. Rice was present at the first assault, and was struck twice by members of No. 17.

Thomas Smith, sworn—Carried the signal at the second assault, and got ahead of the carriage, when all at once one of No. 17's members or runners came up and struck him, and said, "Your Company's behind." [Laughter.]

Witness—I didn't come here to be made a "laughing stock."

Alderman Howard—That will do, Thomas.

On the part of the defence, Landon McNulty was examined as to the first assault. He had command, and saw no one hit; none of 17's men left the rope. He admitted that No. 37 was assaulted, but he said that none of his men were engaged in it; never knew any of his men to attack No. 37.

William McFadden—Present at first assault; had the tongue of No. 17. Witness said that No. 37 met into them twice, while No. 17 was about to pass them; there was also a little disturbance in the Bowery, did not see any one struck; I think that No. 37 was to blame; there were 17 of No. 37 are like the boys at school who get whipped for "doing nothing."

Alderman Howard (to the Foreman of No. 17)—Don't your Company a fighting Company?

Foreman—No Sir, I don't think we have this reputation.

Decision reserved.

Complaint of the Mayor against Hook and Ladder Company No. 4 for running on the sidewalk in East Broadway and breaking a sleep.

Thomas Wilding, Foreman, was sworn, and said that there was only one member with the truck at the time; his name is Joseph Winfield.

Complaint against Hose Company No. 47 and Engine Company No. 16, for running on the sidewalk. The Foreman admitted the complaints to be true.

Report from Board of Consolidation in favor of repairing houses of Hose Company No. 7.

Decision reserved until next meeting, in order to give Alderman Trowbridge an opportunity to examine the premises.

Petition of Hydrant Company No. 4, to be organized into a Hose Company.

In answer to a question by Alderman Trowbridge, the Chief Engineer said the Fifth and Sixth Districts were now well provided with Hose Companies, and that there was no necessity whatever for the organization of any new companies in the Fire Department. Laid over.

The complaint against Engine Company No. 17, for running on the sidewalk.

The Assistant Foreman admitted that he had command at the time.

The Committee decided to suspend John White, Assistant Foreman of Engine Companies Nos. 17 and 15, and the Foremen of Engine Companies Nos. 6, 26, and 32, and Hose Companies Nos. 5 and 47, and Joseph Winfield of Hook and Ladder Company No. 4, for running their apparatus on the sidewalk.

The Committee then adjourned until Wednesday next.

CITY SCHOOLS.

Board of Education—Finances, &c.

The Board of Education met on Wednesday. Wm. H. NEILSON, President, in the Chair.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From the School Officers of the Twentieth Ward, asking the establishment of an evening school in that Ward. Referred to Committee on Evening Schools.

From the School Officers of the Thirteenth Ward, asking permission to consolidate Primary Schools Nos. 9 and 31 with the Primary School No. 4 in Rivington-street. The Primary Schools Nos. 6 and 21, the communication states, are conducted in the basements of churches, and the transfer to the new school house about to be opened in Rivington-street, it states will allow the same to be kept up at much less cost, besides affording increased facilities for instruction and comfort of the pupils. Referred to Committee on New Schools.

And a communication was received signed by five School Officers of the Twentieth Ward, urging that the bill of Mr. McCLAIRE for repairs to the school house in Thirty-seventh-street, be paid. The matter of this bill having been before the Board before under a remonstrance signed by several Officers of the Twentieth Ward, adverse to paying said bill, and a writ of mandamus having also been issued by Mr. McCLAIRE from the Supreme Court asking the payment of the same, the introduction again of the subject gave rise to prolonged and animated discussion. A resolution to pay the bill was lost. The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the Committee on Repairs together with the Superintendent of School Buildings be directed to examine the work for which Mr. McCLAIRE claimed $1,209 32, and to report if such sum be reasonable and proper for the amount of work performed, and if not what is the fair value of the same.

Communication from the Trustees of Common Schools of the Twentieth Ward, asking an appropriation of $1,000 to purchase ground adjoining site of Ward School No. 35. Referred to Committee on Sites and School-houses.

Application from school officers of the Tenth Ward, for an appropriation of $16 to make certain alterations in School-house No. 7, in Carmine-street. Referred to Committee on Repairs.

Application from school officers of Third Ward, for authority to purchase an additional lot for School-house No. 44, and asking an appropriation of $7,000 for the same. Referred to Committee on Sites and School-houses.

Application from school officers of Third Ward, for permission to execute a lease for twenty-one years, at $1,500 a year, of No. 180 Chambers-street, and an appropriation to fit the same up for school purposes. Referred so much as relates to leasing, to Finance Committee; and so much as relates to fitting up to Committee on Repairs.

REPORTS.

Of Committee on Elections, recommending the appointment of John Ritter as Trustee of Common Schools of the Fourth Ward, Josiah W. Brown Trustee of the First Ward, and Wm. Revell Inspector of Common Schools of the Seventh Ward. The nominations were confirmed.

The City Superintendent and Assistant Superintendents submitted a report, giving a list of school books to be used in the Ward Schools. The list contained, with slight variations, the school-books heretofore in use. The report alludes to the text-books in use in the Free Academy and in the Normal Schools, and states that any alteration deemed advisable in these schools it was thought best to leave to the Professors and teachers of said schools respectively. The report was ordered to be printed.

MONTHLY REPORT OF THE CITY SUPERINTENDENT.

A lengthy and interesting communication was received from the City Superintendent, giving a detailed statement of the examination, by himself and Assistant Superintendents, of the different Ward Schools, during the past month, with numerous suggestions for general improvement. The communication was ordered to be printed.

FINANCES OF THE BOARD.

The Finance Committee, in compliance with a previous resolution passed by the Board, directing that application be made to the Common Council for an appropriation of $100,000 to meet the deficiency in the school moneys for the year 1854, and that the Finance Committee be authorized to take the necessary and legal steps to obtain the same, submitted a report, with memorial appended, for presentation to the Common Council.

In the report the Committee state that the necessities of the system of public education require that some additional means should be placed at the disposal of the Board of Education for the current year. The deficiency of the year 1854, they state, was in part provided for temporarily by the appropriation of $125,000 by the Common Council, by anticipating the school moneys of 1855 to that amount, thereby curtailing the necessary operations of our system for the present year to the whole extent of the deficiency. It was deemed by the Committee of the greatest consequence to the public interests that this difficulty should not be made to bear upon the different schools. All proper means, it was urged, should be taken to obtain the amount of the deficiency.

The following is the memorial:

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of New-York:

The Board of Education of the City of New-York respectfully represent that in the month of November last past an application was made to your honorable body in due legal form for an appropriation of $100,001 00 to meet the deficiency in the sum apportioned to meet the necessary and legal expense of public education in the Common Schools of the City for the year ending Dec. 31, 1854, and that in said application, forming a printed document known as a document No. 35 of the Board of Education for the year 1854, (copies of which were furnished to each member of the Common Council,) was fully set forth, and certified the cause of such deficiency, and that the same was unavoidable, as is provided in the 16th section of the act of the Legislature relative to the Common Schools of the City of New-York. Therefore, in pursuance of the provision of said section, it was requisite for the Common Council to raise by loan, in anticipation of the annual tax such sum or sums as were necessary to meet such deficiency. But the Common Council for the year 1854, either from the press of time, or some other reason of which the Board of Education has not been apprised, did not make the appropriation which it was authorized and directed by the statute referred to and quoted. In consequence of which the Board of Education remained without the means of paying its just liabilities, omitting the deficiency referred to, without continuing upon the current expenses of common schools for the year 1855; and it has, therefore, been compelled to advance and pay the same out of the school money for the present year. In consequence of this, and unless your honorable body will now appropriate the amount deficient for the year 1854, amounting to $100,001 00, the Board of Education must necessarily be prevented from taking further action in any case, however important, for the revenue or improvement of the means for the public education in counties, cities and districts for the year 1855, because much as the balance of the annual appropriation and raised by the Supervisors for the present year will certainly suffice to meet the current expenses consequent upon keeping the schools in operation.

Many cases of important nature, therefore, remain without attention, unless the Common Council will now appropriate for the deficiency of 1854, and which would involve serious consequence to the cause of public education. These comprise, among other matters, the furnishing and fitting up of the new school-house in Twenty-second-street, in the Sixteenth Ward; the furnishing and fitting up the new school-house in Thirty-seventh-street, in the Twenty-first Ward; the fitting up and furnishing the new school-house in Twenty-fourth-street, in the Eighteenth Ward; the fitting up a new school-house on Forty-fourth-street, in the Twenty-second Ward, on a site purchased for that purpose a year ago; the erection and fitting up of a new school-house on Houston-street, in the Seventh Ward; the erection and fitting up of a new school-house in the western part of the Eighth Ward; the alteration and enlargement of the school building in the Seventh Ward; the repairs and alterations of the school-houses in the Eleventh Ward, and the necessary cleansing and repairing of the several school buildings throughout the City, not enumerated above. The Board of Education, therefore, respectfully urge attention to the application for the deficiency heretofore made, and ask from your honorable body the adoption of an appropriate resolution, directing the Comptroller to furnish the amount to the credit of the Board of Education with the Chamberlain of the City, as the exigency may be required.

A resolution was adopted that the memorial be adopted and printed, and that the Finance Committee present the same to the Common Council.

PIANO-FORTES IN SCHOOLS.

The Committee on Course of Studies and School-books submitted a report recommending that pianos be adopted in the different ward schools, and offered a resolution, that a supply of piano-fortes be contracted for, not to exceed a cost of $300 each, when the funds of the Board will warrant the expenditure. After some discussion the report was laid on the table.

The Board adjourned for two weeks.

MEDICAL.

Academy of Medicine.

The Academy of Medicine held its regular meeting on Wednesday evening, in the small chapel of the University. The principal business of the evening was the reception and consideration of an original paper by Dr. BUCK on "The Treatment of badly united fractures." Dr. CAMPBELL STEWART was also charged with certain amendments to a by-law of no public interest.

At 8 o'clock about eighty gentlemen were present, the Chair being occupied by Dr. BEADLE, and Dr. FOSTER officiating as Secretary.

The intelligible nature of the subject of Dr. Buck's contribution, and its immediate practical and general interest, will justify us in presenting the non-professional reader with a brief abstract of his views on the non-union of fracture, and the remedial contrivances, if any, to obviate the inconvenience and deformity arising from unsatisfactory adaptation of broken bones. First in order, of medicine was read, embodying a most instructive discussion on "scarlatina" and "croup," and also a reference to improvements in the construction of the stethoscope.

The report of the section on "Public Health" failed in producing matter of record, owing to the impossibility of forming a quorum.

Dr. BUCK then proceeded to read his paper on badly united fractures of the thigh, first reciting the history of several cases.

In one case, in the New-York Hospital, the subject being a sailor, with fractured thigh, firm union took place after three weeks subsequent to a scientific reduction, effected without the advantage of the improved mode of keeping up extension of the limb. Eventually in this case there was very little shortening of the limb.

In a second case, the artificial constant extension of the limb was found to be an exceedingly useful adjunct in the treatment.

In a third instance, also of fractured thigh, the limb was put up in a straight apparatus, but after five weeks, even with the aid of continued extension, no attempt at union was perceptible. Re-fracture, with a continuance of extension, was successful in this instance. There was very little shortening.

With the aid of "Jarvis' Adjustor" and other, retracture was practised in another instance. This case also did well.

A Norwegian sailor, five weeks before, at sea, had suffered several fractures, among them fracture of the thigh. In this instance, a broken jaw, hunger, and a cachectic disposition, had evidently interfered with the curative efforts of nature. But after a time, nursing and tonics in Hospital had conspired for the poor fellow a very deformed bony union of the broken thigh. At the end of sixteen weeks from the accident, refracture was practised, and the man has the prospect of a useful limb, lengthened from 4 inches of deformed contraction to only 1½ inches from its natural extent.

The Doctor then adverted to the causes of deformity in fracture cases. In the absence of surgical aid, (as at sea for instance,) unresisted contraction of the muscles naturally produces deformity. Mania and delirium produce the same results, so also does the removal of splints before union has been secured.

Patients sometimes refractory or restless, by accidental falls, and something of this kind, no doubt, led surgeons to perceive how with advantage artificial and intentional refracture may be adopted.

When the interval since the fracture is not too long, and the ends of the fragments are still movable, extension alone may serve to elongate the limb sufficiently. If, however, after a few days' trial, no material advantage has been gained by stretching the callus, there should be no longer any delay in rupturing it. The method of operating employed in the above cases has proved safe, and it is believed may be resorted too with small risk of injury to the soft parts. As to the time which may elapse before re-fracture, or any attempt at it is hopeless or injudicious, much discrepancy of opinion exists.

DUPUYTREN thought sixty days would form the limit. VELPEAU thought after the third month there would be danger of fracturing the bone elsewhere than at the old seat of fracture. One of the cases cited in the New-York Hospital was conclusive against this opinion.

In reply to a question,

Dr. BUCK explained that the "adjustor" of "Jarvis," was not indispensable. Provided extension be adopted as in ordinary cases, and kept up so as not to produce excoriation or sloughing by its too close application, no special machinery is absolutely essential. The one of FABRICIUS ab Aquapendente, flowing without overlapping is easily overcome by pressure with common pads.

After some desultory discussion on fracture,

Dr. BATCHELDER showed a specimen of cod liver oil, which he regarded as particularly pure, and which had been very useful in his hands.

Dr. GRISCOM asked if there were any tests applicable to determine the purity and efficacy of cod liver oil.

Dr. BATCHELDER admitted he knew of none excepting the honesty and intelligence of those who had prepared it.

Dr. GRISCOM had tried the ordinary and recommended tests upon specimens which he knew or believed to be pure, but which appeared to be adulterated, if the test could be relied on. The apothecaries all obtain their oil from a very few makers. He wished to know if any new test had been discovered upon which dependence could be placed.

Dr. HENSHALL said that a large manufacturer had told him there was no test excepting the taste, and whatever might be the color, it was immaterial. The only secret in the manufacture was the immediate preparation, and before any decomposition of the liver of the fish could take place. Ten miles of land carriage of the fish is sufficient to color the oil.

A member wished to inquire if any vehicle well disguised the taste of this preparation!

Dr. COMSTOCK remarked that a fluidrachm of the oil of cinnamon added to an ordinary pint bottle of the oil will best cover its taste. He thought nitric acid the best test of its purity.

A member thought the sections on Materia Medica and Chemistry would do well to investigate the question as to whether a test can be found to determine the purity of an article in so general use.

The matter was so referred, on the suggestion of Dr. GRISCOM and other members.

At the conclusion of the proceedings, Dr. GRISCOM called attention to the fact that a reporter was in the room; and entered his objections. [This reporter, from the office of the DAILY TIMES, was the only member of the Press present.] Dr. G., in the course of his remarks, indulged in an attack of a purely personal character upon that gentleman. Dr. FINNELL essayed to introduce the reporter to the Chairman, in his capacity as a medical man, but was prevented by the interference of Dr. GRISCOM, and a lively discussion followed.

The meeting finally adjourned, without voting to exclude the reporter of the TIMES, or others.

Injunction Against the Nicaragua Transit Company.

SUPERIOR COURT—APRIL 5.

Before Hon. Judge Duer.

Daniel B. Allen vs. Charles Morgan, President of the Accessory Transit Company of Nicaragua, et al.

Counsel for plaintiff, Messrs. C. O'Conor, E. W. Stoughton and F. H. Upton. For defendants, Messrs. F. B. Cutting, H. F. Clark, and J. S. Sandford.

In this case, postponed from the 31st ult., the counsel for the plaintiff produced and read a number of affidavits in answer to the new matter contained in the affidavits of the defendants read when the case was last up in reply to the complaint of plaintiff.

The first affidavit read was that of the plaintiff (D. B. Allen) himself, in which he deposes amongst other things, to the facts and circumstances stated below. The deponent was one of the original grantees from the Government of Nicaragua to the Atlantic and Pacific Canal Company, and upon the organization of said Company was chosen Vice President thereof. Subsequently, when the Accessory Transit Company was organized, he was elected one of the Directors thereof. When first it was proposed to connect that Company with some navigation through the proposed contract with Cornelius Vanderbilt for the establishment of a line of steamships for the transportation of passengers and merchandise between the ports of New-York and San Francisco, he (the plaintiff) demurred and declined as foundation, until when he found that those having control of said Company were determined to use it for their own private ends, regardless of the obligations of the trust confided to them, resigned his directorship. He continued, however, to be a stockholder in the Company after his resignation as director, and at the time of the purchase of the steamships of the Vanderbilt line, he was a stockholder to the amount of [illegible] shares. At a meeting of the Board of Directors held on the 1st of January, 1853, and held at New-York, he was elected one of the Directors, when, among other business, the question of the purchase of the Vanderbilt line was discussed. The deponent was opposed to the purchase, and declared that he was not prepared to agree to any such arrangement. The deponent was elected President of the Company, and had the sole direction of the affairs of the Company, and had the sole direction of the affairs of the Company. The deponent was elected President in the place of Mr. Vanderbilt, who resigned the office. At the same meeting, the question of the purchase was discussed, when, among other business, the deponent was elected President

Prussia and Privateering.

If there be any one benignant principle of international law which the United States, more than any other nation, have defended and promoted with zeal and persevering consistency, that principle is the inviolability of the neutral flag and the freedom of neutral commerce. With an equally enlightened policy have they endeavored, as far as it could be effected in the present state of opinion among nations, to secure the freedom of conscience and of religious worship throughout the world.

One of the first acts of the old confederacy, upon its awakening to its new and independent existence, was, by solemn treaty with France, to establish the principle that, under certain conditions, free ships should make free goods. Shortly after, they gave in their adherence to the celebrated declaration of the Empress CATHERINE of Russia, respecting the rights of neutrals and belligerents. A clause in the treaty with the Netherlands, in 1782, and in that with Sweden, in 1783, contained a provision similar to that embodied in the French treaty, as did also that with Prussia in 1785, which having expired by lapse of time, was revived by the treaty of 1828.

A similar provision was made in the treaty of 1795 with Spain, and somewhat modified by the treaty of 1820. The gallant and lamented DECATUR also inserted this provision in the treaty of 1815 with the Dey of Algiers.

This policy, thus constantly adhered to by us in the old world, has been uniformly acted upon in our treaties with the South American States,—States, which by reason of the newness of their existence, and their freedom from ancient traditions and prejudices, have afforded a more favorable field for the inauguration of a liberal diplomacy. In every treaty with them, except, we believe, that with Costa Rica, an express article establishing conditionally the principle of free ships, free goods, has been inserted, and generally provisions more or less liberal have been made in favor of the liberty of conscience and worship. While thus sustaining the rights of neutrals by diplomacy, we have not hesitated when occasion demanded, to enforce them by arms. And we gave an evidence of our sincerity, as well as reflected lustre on our navy, by sustaining a war with the vast marine power of England in 1812, in defence of the rights of neutrality. This principle has with us received a new consecration by the recent commercial treaty negotiated with Russia, and the spirit of the part is seen evidently to preside over the policy of the present.

In the treaty of amity and commerce between Prussia and the United States, in 1785, it was stipulated that, in case of war, neither party should grant commissions to any private armed vessels to attack the commerce of the other. This stipulation, which was limited in its duration, and has long since expired, Prussia, it is known, recently proposed to our present Administration to renew, and thus take another step towards softening the effects of war. The United States have, however, refused to accede to this proposal, and this refusal has elicited sharp and severe comments abroad, and assertions that the former liberal and pacific policy of the United States has been instigated purely by interest and not by principle. And because in the present condition of our military and commercial marine, we are neither able nor willing to go the length of interdicting the system of privateering and reprisals, all the glory which we have acquired by having inaugurated a more liberal maritime policy than before existed among nations, is now to be denied us. A fancied vindication of the present action of the Government, or of the sincerity of its past peaceful policy, from these foreign aspersions, would be superfluous. A nation which, in her diplomacy and her treaties, has uniformly endeavored to secure the liberty of conscience, of worship and of sepulture, and has in many States been met with a refusal, has no very pressing occasion to reply to their exclamations of insincerity and illiberality.

The reply of our Executive to the proposition of Prussia was a perfectly proper one, and should be satisfactory to any diplomatist acquainted with the present position and character of our own military and commercial marine. We have stood, and that essential, of the right of issuing letters of marque, and of fitting out privateers, in case of war, for the protection of our commerce. We give the world the best guaranty that a nation can give of the sincerity of its pacific policy, by the insignificance of our army and navy establishment. Is it not indeed unreasonable, after this, to ask of us to strip ourself of those means of offensive warfare which have been framed in the very pursuits of peace, and which the events of a single day may render all important to our security! There are certainly some seeming inconsistencies in the policy and the institutions of the United States. Our defence of neutral rights, and stopping short of the entire abolition of all private warfare on the ocean, is one of these; our unlimited personal liberty, side by side with the institution of slavery, is another: the greatest and most difficult to be understood by those not intimately acquainted with the history of our country. But the close observer is able to reconcile these inconsistencies with a perfect sincerity in the avowed principles and policy of our Union. In the case of great States, nothing is more common than to see their animating principles of action partially controlled, and even contradicted, by institutions whose power cannot be immediately broken, and whose foundations lie deeply buried in the past. So, too, the policy which they would be inclined to pursue is cut short of a complete and perfect development by overwhelming considerations of geographical position, important industrial pursuits, or the absence of a great standing army and a numerous navy. With them, not what is abstractly right and just, but what is attainable, and possible under existing circumstances, is the desideratum. Whatever may be said against the demoralizing effects of the system of privateering and letters of marque—and the abuses to which it is liable may be admitted—still there are no objections of that peremptory character which should constrain a nation acting on the highest principle to surrender it, to its own great and manifest detriment. States, in these discretionary matters, are to be governed of necessity, for the most part, by their interests; and the geographical position of Prussia is such, that in the event of a war, the system of privateering would avail nothing to her, while it would be the very right arm of the United States. This Europe knows, and therefore feels disposed to look with jealousy upon our mighty commercial marine, which, after all, is one of the greatest conservators of peace, bearing as it does wealth and activity on every wind of heaven to every part of the globe while peace subsists, and threatening to bear to its enemies an equally wide-spread desolation, should war call forth its destructive energies.

The system of privateering is a half-dozen centuries old, and has always been recognized as a perfectly legitimate weapon of warfare. It is eminently adapted to the self-reliant, independent action, and control-disdaining genius of Americans. Under this system multitudes of bold and patriotic spirits, like PAUL JONES of the past, would with the American flag at their masthead victoriously sweep the seas of our enemies, who would find no congenial field for the exercise of their energies in the subordination of the regular service. Those who would have the nobleness of nature to expose their lives for the honor of their country in this way, would be found in general too generous to be guilty of acts of excess and injustice. If it be said that the practice is a licentious one, and opens the door to great abuses through the cupidity and irresponsibility of those who engage in it, it may be replied that war itself is productive of still more licentious and terrible consequences; and that the United States show their devotion to humanity by sedulously avoiding this greater scourge, of which the other is a mere concomitant. We will not stop to discuss the question which some have agitated, whether war is less likely to arise, by softening and lessening the rigor of its rules, than by leaving it intact, in all its original sweeping desolation. At all events, nations are bound in their treaties, and their compacts, not to sacrifice their safety or their essential means of defence, to the amelioration of the horrors of war; and neither Prussia, nor any other State, can justly tax us with inconsistency or retrogression by reason of our refusal to do so.

Ho! for California.

Over seven hundred passengers sailed in the steamer George Law, yesterday, for California vid Aspinwall and the Panama Railroad! Some of these were gentlemen suddenly called to the Pacific State in consequence of the recent financial revulsion there. Others were ladies and children on their way to join husbands and fathers whose engrossment in the cares of business will not admit a journey hither for the purpose of carrying their household treasures to the new home. But any one who cast an eye thoughtfully over the throng of travelers could not fail to see that the great mass of them were artisans and laborers,—men who hope and expect to find in California profitable employment for hard industrious hands.

It is evident that the Spring tide of emigration to the Pacific has fairly set in, and that it is to be very great this year—greater probably than at any time since the discovery of the gold. This may be accounted for in various ways. First, the facilities for getting to California are immeasurably improved. There is now no necessity for braving those pestilential fevers, the seeds of which lie in the decaying vegetable matter of a luxuriant tropical climate. The passenger to California by the Panama route, instead of sleeping amid the miasms of the Isthmus, as formerly, now breathes the invigorating air of the Pacific Ocean three hours after he steps from the deck of the good ship which has borne him over the Atlantic and the Carribbean. And this without detentions by swollen rapids, or shallow streams, or stubborn mules, or impassable mud ponds,—and more than all, without being exposed to the land sharks whose trade flourished so thriftily in the days before the railroad was opened. A journey to the Pacific is thus made a pleasure trip, instead as of yore, a hardship requiring resolution to brave.

But we hope there is still another reason for the increased immigration, speaking much more hopefully for the permanent prosperity of our young sister on the Pacific. It has been her curse, heretofore, that the mass of those who crossed her borders, went to hunt for gold, with no purpose of settlement, but with the intention of skinning her placers rapidly as possible of their wealth, and then leaving their places to be supplied with a new set of adventurers, with similar wants and similar views. California has not been thought of sufficiently by our laboring classes, as a place for permanent settlement; and she can never be safely prosperous until there is a decided change in this respect. That this change will occur at no distant day cannot be doubted. Indeed, we trust it has begun its work already. And it is for the interest of the idle among the laboring and the operative classes of our Atlantic States to consider well whether California does not offer flattering inducements to them to contribute liberally to her permanent population.

Let us look at some of the facts. The climate of California is exceedingly healthy; its soil is productive, and the demand for intelligent labor great. For the evidence to support this latter assertion we refer to the rates of wages in California on the 1st January last, which we published several weeks since. The wages of mechanics ranged from five to ten dollars per day, and of laborers from fifty to ninety dollars per month and found. Draymen get twenty-five dollars per week, cooks seventy-five to a hundred and fifty dollars per month, and servant-girls from thirty to fifty dollars per month. A reference to the San Francisco Prices Current of the same date, shows the fact that provisions and clothing were at that time about as cheap in California as here. They may have been somewhat lower then than they will be again, although that is not certain; but the indications are that they will not in future be much increased.

Mining has doubtless been overdone in California; and it has returned us many a dispirited adventurer whose heart was full of bitterness against the State of his sojourn. The day has passed for rapid fortunes in California, made either by mining or by mercantile adventures; and that very fact opens it to steady, persistent operative and productive industry, as a field perhaps superior to any other. Those who are not doing well here, and who are inclined to emigrate to California with the purpose of settling there permanently, as mechanics, artisans or farmers, content with moderate gains, can now calculate with comparative safety, it must be admitted, upon a good living at least, and ultimate fortune. There are tens of thousands among us of this class, who would better their own condition by so doing, at the same time that they would contribute to build up and give permanence to our Empire upon the Pacific. Think of it, ye sons of toil; who labor from sun to sun for a scanty pittance—scarce sufficient to keep the wolf from the door, and the landlord from too familiar acquaintance with the Sheriff; but think of it intelligently, and decide prudently, whether or no our young and thrifty sister does not need your services, and whether she does not offer you a reward for them greater than we can afford you on the Atlantic slope.

POLLOK's Course of Time has been denounced in a religious paper in Virginia on account of the following lines it contains:

"Unchristian thought! on what pretense see'st
Of right inherited, or else acquired;
Of loss, or profit, or what plea you name,
To buy and sell, to barter, whip and hold
In chains, a being of celestial make—
Of kindred form, of kindred faculties,
Of kindred mind, heir of immortal hope,
Born free, and heir of an immortal state;
Thought villainous, absurd, detestable!
Unworthy to be harbored in a fiend!"—(Exchange.

Touch them gently—or the Union is dissolved. Approach them as if for shoes you wore moccasins and the path you trod were carpeted, or you frighten them into a convulsion. Our Southern brethren are as nervous as ladies of an uncertain age. They see an offence even in our most approved figures of speech. Why, a man can't muse aloud or hum some old schoolboy song in South Carolina, unless he has first revised his stock of remembered stanzas and expurgated all that bears upon the Slavery question, without endangering the Commonwealth. A thorough bred Yankee couldn't whistle a tune right through without the risk of hurting somebody's feelings.

It behooves us as brethren of the same family with the dainty gentlemen who, through their cutaneous membranes, feel POLLOK's random lash, to pause and overhaul our carpet-bags before we travel, lest the waste paper we wrap our spare boots in have some offensive sentiment on it,—lest some stray sentence in our pocket SHAKESPEARE have a thrust at the institution, which, communicated unfelt through so many years, shall expend itself upon some lordly patriarch's tender feelings. Soberly, though, it is a great annoyance that poets must be sticking in their twaddle about Liberty every tenth line, and those old poets especially were careless beyond all excuse. Let's have a Convention to purge the fellows of their frequent contempts, to rub smooth the "Liberty" side of all our corns—and from the "Declaration of Independence," the Bible, and all spelling books, blot out anything that could possibly tempt a negro to hanker after another sort of life than the slave's. Let us toll the Underground Railroad.

☞ In speaking of the act of the Governor in superseding the Superintendent of the Bank Department, the Tribune says:

"We could not consistently allow an improper person to be reappointed to an important office, without entering our protest against it. The credit of rightly judging the facts in the case, and fearlessly acting upon them, belongs to the Governor alone."

The implication here is that the Governor refused to reappoint Mr. ST. JOHN because he believed him to be an improper person for the place. This is entirely untrue. The Governor has repeatedly declared his entire confidence in the ability, integrity and efficiency with which Mr. ST. JOHN has discharged the duties of his office,—and his utter disbelief of all statements impugning his character or official conduct. This, therefore, cannot be the reason why he was not reappointed. What the reason was,—as we said yesterday,—we are quite as ignorant as the public at large.

☞ We have information from Halifax of the failure of the New-York and Newfoundland Telegraph Company to secure a charter from the Provincial Parliament, to enable them to build a competing line of telegraph through that Province. The application for the charter was not acted upon. It was ascertained that nearly all the members of Parliament were opposed to the project, believing that the Provincial Telegraph Company are willing to afford every reasonable facility for the dispatch of such business as the new Company might require from the Nova Scotia lines.

Rhode-Island State Election.

The returns of the recent Rhode Island State election show that, as was anticipated, the Know-Nothings have swept the State. They have carried all the towns but two—Gloucester and Foster. The former sends two Democratic Representatives, and the latter sends a Whig to the Senate and a Democrat to the House. All the other members of both Houses and State officers are Know-Nothings.

☞ The Grand State Council of the Know-Nothings which met at Lancaster, Penn., on Tuesday, adjourned in great confusion yesterday afternoon. The occasion was a proposition for open organization.

☞ The steamer George Law sailed for Aspinwall yesterday afternoon, with over seven hundred passengers, chiefly bound for California. Among the passengers, we understand, were Señor TIRADO, late Peruvian Minister, and F. W. RICE, late Consul at Acapulco, Mexico, who has gone out to Lima, Peru, with his family, to reside. Notwithstanding the large number of passengers who went out on board this steamer, it was quite evident that her ample and well ventilated cabins and steerage were competent for the accommodation and comfort of them all; and the excellent order and arrangement of everything on board, and the provision made for the comfort of the passengers in all respects, gave assurance that the day of hardship on a trip to California has long since passed.

Musical.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—There will be no performances to-night. The rehearsals of "William Tell" are being carried on with such determination, that the management has concluded to forego one ordinary night's performance in order to try the full effect of the scenery, &c. From what we hear of this opera we suspect it will be one of the most complete musical productions ever given in this country. The fortunes of the Academy will change if sufficient energy in all instances as in this, is displayed. Can any one wonder that the houses have been bad when the only attraction has been DONIZETTI and VERDI's "Rigoletto"—the latter from the commencement a comparative failure!

To-morrow evening (Saturday) there will be a Sacred Concert, on which occasion ROSSINI's "Stabat Mater," the Prayer from "Moses," and a fine selection of miscellaneous music will be performed. A dollar ticket will admit a lady and gentleman.

Mr. W. H. FRY's new oratorio will be performed on the evening of Thursday week. By desire of the management the performance was postponed to that day. There will, we trust, be no further postponement.

BUCKLEY's SERENADERS will take a step in the right direction on Monday next. They will play the English version of "L'Elisir d'Amore" in white faces. We should be satisfied if they never blacked them again.

New Music.

We have received some very excellent new pieces of music from the press of Messrs. HALL & SON. We are glad to know that their reform in reducing music from its former exorbitant prices has met with decided success. The good results of this plan will not be fully known for some time. Thousands will now learn music who were before prevented by the expense of the music itself. This reduction in price is really a matter of great interest to the home circle, and should be upheld by the public against the opposition of the rest of the trade.

Their latest publications received are: "The Masonic Serenade," by J. A. FOWLER; "The Soldier's Pillow Redown," by PERZ. H. BROWN; "The Orphan's Lament Song," by CHAS. JARVIS; "I know that my Redeemer Liveth," transcribed for the piano-forte, by W. VINCENT WALLACE.

STATE AFFAIRS.

LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGS.

Special Correspondence of New-York Daily Times.

ALBANY, Thursday, April 5, 1853.

A delegation from Massachusetts, consisting of the Committees on Railroads and Canals of the two branches of the Legislature of the Bay State, came over to Albany last evening, on a tour of inquiry.

This morning, Mr. BLATCHFORD offered a resolution providing for the appointment of a Committee on behalf of the Assembly, to extend to the delegation from the Legislature of our sister State the hospitalities of the Capital, and to invite them to take seats upon the floor of the Assembly Chamber. The Committee was appointed, and the delegation introduced to the House through the Chairman of the House Committee, Mr. BLATCHFORD. They were welcomed by Speaker LITTLEJOHN, and that welcome responded to and acknowledged by Mr. MAINS, of the Massachusetts body. Among the visitors I notice Hon. S. C. MAINS, of the Senate, Hon. STEPHEN GARDNER, of the House, Hon. Mr. FOSTER and Hon. Mr. LYMAN, of the Governor's Council. Also, Rev. ROBERT B. HALL, Member elect to Congress from the First District, and Hon. A. R. ELY, who was the candidate for United States Senator against Gen. WILSON.

The delegation will, I understand, return to Boston this afternoon.

THIRD READING OF BILLS

Is to be the steady orders of the day in the Assembly after it is once again reached, unless it is laid aside by unanimous consent. This order was made at a much earlier period of the session last year, and yet there was a large number of bills laid over that were ready for their final reading.

CLAIM BILLS

Have unusually hard sledging in the House. There is little disposition to give them even a consideration, and a strong inclination to fetch them "down the banks." There were half a dozen of them, more or less, up in Committee of the Whole this morning. When they came to a vote the enacting clause was struck from each, and so they went overboard.

ORINOCO.

Mr. BLATCHFORD made an effort to have the Committee of the Whole take into consideration the bill to regulate the rates of interest—which is in reality the bill to abolish the usury laws, not directly and at once, but gradually and by stealth. By an overwhelming vote the House refused to consider the bill. I hope the vote this morning will convince those who have so strenuously sought the abolition of the usury laws, that for this session at least there is no chance of success. And I would suggest that they give it up altogether. It could not get ten votes in the House, and yet no man could do more for it, or has labored harder than Mr. BLATCHFORD. Where he fails there is little use in others trying.

WHERE THE DOCUMENTS ARE.

This morning Mr. PECK asked unanimous consent to present a preamble and resolutions setting forth that nearly all the mail matter sent from the Assembly during the session had been suffered to accumulate in the Post-Office at this place, which accumulation is imputed to the culpable negligence of the Postmaster of the Albany office. The resolutions suggest the propriety of of the removal of the official charged with this neglect. The resolutions were not admitted. I do not know what truth there is in the allegations embodied in the preamble, but I do know that, in forwarding letters and papers received at the Albany office, destined to reach members of the Legislature and strangers in attendance, the Postmaster has exhibited a marked ability, combining promptness and accuracy. I judge this by my own experience.

THE CHURCH TENURE BILL.

In sending my letter yesterday, I accidentally omitted that portion giving the vote on the final passage of the Senate bill to Regulate the Tenure of Church Property. It was passed by an almost unanimous vote—the Ayes being 93, the Noes but 9; absent and not voting 20. Among those absent, was Mr. BLATCHFORD, of your City. Taking this chance for a text, the Register this morning charges that Mr. BLATCHFORD dodged the issue, afraid to vote No, and unwilling to take the responsibility of voting Aye. Upon the assembling of the House this morning, Mr. B. had a Question of Privilege, and having obtained the floor, thus replied to the implications embodied in the Register:

Mr. BLATCHFORD—Mr. Speaker: I rise to a question of privilege. I beg leave to call the attention of the House to an article which I find in the Albany Register, of this morning, which I will read:

[illegible]

[illegible] Mr. BRIGGS was, by the motion of Mr. BLATCHFORD (with the consent of Mr. LITTLEJOHN), excused by unanimous consent of the House for declining to vote on a question where he was totally unaware of its nature. Yesterday, Mr. BLATCHFORD [illegible] to rule on the Church Property bill—a question that was a subject of great interest, and Member INVERSOLL was in a delicate situation, from his inadvertent absence at the time of voting! Sir, I think, under the circumstances, that the reporter upon decency and parliamentary law, as other men have to do, must err.

Mr. Speaker, in replying to this article, I desire, in the first place, to say that it is not true that I moved the resolution fastening Mr. BRIGGS's absence upon the occasion referred to. In the second place, there is a very great difference between the case of Mr. BRIGGS and the position which I occupy. That gentleman was in his seat when his name was called; and, before the question was put upon his motion to be excused from voting, declared peremptorily, his determination not to vote, and carried out that determination after the House had refused to excuse him. In my case, Sir, no such facts existed. I was not in the House when the bill was read, or when the question was put. My name was not called while I was in the House, and I never heard it called at all. When the bill was up for discussion several days since, I stated distinctly, that I was in favor of the principles of the bill, but opposed to some of its features on constitutional grounds.

This article says that the bill had been "discussed all Winter." This is notoriously untrue. So far as I am concerned, I never read the bill until it came up in this House last week. When it was up, I stated that I was in favor of the general principles of the bill, but that I deemed it unconstitutional; and in that opinion I was sustained by the intelligent, able and enlightened lawyer who stands at the head of the Judiciary Committee. I still believe the bill unconstitutional. I did not, therefore, wish to vote against the bill, because I concurred in its general principles, nor did I wish to vote for it, because I believed some of its provisions to be unconstitutional.

The two cases—that of Mr. BRIGGS and myself—were entirely different. I was not in the House when the bill was read. I was not in the House when my name was called, and, therefore, by the rule, peremptorily precluded from voting. I did not refuse to vote; nor did I hear my name called at any time, while the question was pending. The article, therefore, is wholly gratuitous, groundless and untrue, from first to last, from beginning to end.

DON'T THEY DELIZTLE THEMSELVES!

While sundry claim bills were under discussion this morning, it was the fashion for members having them in charge to claim for their petitioners extraordinary consideration, for reason that they had no money to pay the lobbying through their bills, and hence they were entitled to be heard upon their merits. Doubtless, the pressure of a lobby influence has been brought to bear in favor of the passage of many a bill—and, doubtless, that influence has been seen and felt in every Legislature that has ever assembled in the halls of legislation. Doubtless, that influence will operate largely in every legislative congregation that will soon meet here at Albany—and yet I think members might be much better employed than in retailing to each other in their place on the floor of the Assembly chamber charges of the existence of such an influence. They might act more wisely than to give credence to charges that, if true, involve the character of every member on the floor. They should have the judgment and the discretion to see that they accuse nobody else as strongly as they accuse themselves. Can they not feel that if members were incorruptible—if honorable representatives were above and beyond the reach of a lobby influence, that influence could have no existence? I refrain from enlarging upon the subject—satisfied that a "wink is as good as a nod."

TRANSFERRING RECORDS.

Senator BENEDICT introduced a bill to authorize the transfer of certain papers in the office of the Clerk of the Court of Appeals to the office of the Clerks of Counties. It permits that any Justice of the Supreme Court may, upon application for that purpose by order, direct any pleadings, orders, decrees and other papers or proceedings relating to the foreclosure of mortgages, the partition of real estate, or the sale or conveyance of infants' estates or property of religious corporations, to be transferred to the office of the Clerk of the County in which the real estate, affected by any such pleadings, orders, decrees, or other papers or proceedings, may be situated.

STATE ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR.

Senator DAYTON introduced a bill directing the State Engineer to nominate to the Canal Board so many division and resident Engineers as in his judgment the public interest shall require. Further, that the Division Engineer thus appointed shall nominate to the State Engineers such assistants as he may deem necessary, from which number the State Engineer shall make his appointments. The State Engineer may remove at pleasure any resident or division, and appoint another person in his place—reporting the fact to the Canal Board at its first session after the removal. The Canal Board to be constituted as now constituted, except that the State Engineer.

I wonder if Senator DAYTON would be willing to stand godfather to this bill, if his political friends made up the Administration? I venture to maintain that he would not, and that he would not vote for it now were it up for a third reading, and his political friends were to be affected by it. It takes from the Canal Board the entire control of the appointment and dismissal of a class of officials who have the entire management of the public works, and subjects the members of that Board to the will and whims of the one man who may happen to be the State Engineer and Surveyor. Does Mr. DAYTON believe the Democratic leadings in thus seeking to build up a one man power? I think not.

IN EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Yesterday, it is understood, a Message was received from the Governor, withdrawing the name of Capt. BRAINARD, who had been nominated for the office of Harbor Master in the City of New-York, and substituting therefor the name of Mr. ABRAHAM PRANCE, of the Sixteenth Ward.

And further, that Capt. BRAINARD and Mr. CHARLES KELSEY, were sent to the Senate for confirmation as Harbor Masters for the city of Brooklyn.

And further, that the name of Dr. HAHAN, which had been before the Senate for confirmation as Resident Physician, and which was withdrawn a week since, was again transmitted yesterday.

And further, that Governor CLARK submitted a Message, assuring the Senate that in withholding from the Senate the Message withdrawing the name of Dr. THOMPSON—and about which some considerable debate was had on Monday last—Senator DICKINSON had acted in strict accordance with the wishes and directions of the Executive, and that his acts received his full and unconditional approval. If this document has an actual existence, it puts to rest the proposed Committee to inquire into the modus operandi by which the Message of withdrawal was arrested in its passage from the Executive to the President of the Senate, the Executive assumption being broad enough to exonerate all parties heretofore implicated. Court of Appeals.

ALBANY, Saturday, April 5.

Evening Session—No. 22 argued.

Calendar for April 6.—Nos. 15, 48, 26, 35, 36, 50, 51, 53, 54, 57, 27.

"Sam" Slow—Suffolk County Election.

RIVERHEAD, Suffolk Co., Wednesday, April 6, 1853.

The Know-Nothings nominated their ticket in this town and thought they should elect it. The day was a fine one, and the Fusion Ticket, headed by the usual Whig candidates for Supervisor and Town Clerk, very quietly (without the distribution of any gin among its supporters,) stepped up to the polls and reflected its men with one or two exceptions, by about eighty majority. SYLVESTER MILLER was elected Supervisor and NATHAN CORWIN, Town Clerk, as they have been each year for the last fourteen years. SYLVESTER MILLER was also elected Justice of the Peace, on his fifth term. Several fraudulent tickets were got up, bearing evident marks of Hindoo ingenuity; one of them was headed Regular Whig Ticket, and evidently intended to distract the regular Whigs, but it did small execution, as not one of these tickets was polled. Whoever invented that ticket probably found it easier to pay a printer's bill than to impose upon voters who don't know nothing. T.

GREENPORT, L. I., Wednesday, April 4, 1853.

* * * Other towns in our county show results not much more complimentary to "Sam." Where the Temperance people voted with him, the young man had everything his own way. But where he named a candidate who was not a Maine Law man—his candidate was seldom chosen.

In Southold the K. N. and Temperance Supervisor (TOWNSEND) was elected. In Southampton the Whig and Temperance man (ROGERS ROSS, Esq.) was elected by two majority. Z.

Great Sale of Works of Art.

Statuary, bronzes, works of art, costly paintings, &c., forming a portion of the personal estate of the late ASAPH STONE, Esq.; (whose fate, together with that of his wife and daughter, forms an episode in the tragic history of the loss of the Arctic,) were sold at public auction yesterday and on the preceding day. The first day's sale, held at No. 167 Waverley-place, was attended by a crowd of ladies. A moderately fair copy of the DULWICH MURILLO was sold to Mr. OAKLEY for $170; "Two Events in the life of Achilles," PETER PAUL RUBENS, (a pair,) sold for $230; "Meeting of Jacob and Esau," by JASPAR BECKERS, $230. Rose—"The Morning Star," MOZIER, $250; sold to Mr. C. SWARE. Also, another piece of statuary, "Venus going to the Bath," BISTRAM, $600; a marble bust of POCAHONTAS, MOZIER, sold to Mr. LORD for $468. "Diana resting for the Chase," a fine conception from the chisel of BARTOLINI, $335; "Love and Fidelity," PERCOLI, $300, to Mr. PECKHAM; "Psyche," $120; two remarkable pictures attributed to ZUCCHARELLI, sold for $60 each; a "Mother and Child," christened SASSOFERRATO, sold for $60; two huge encrustics of the "darker stain" school and called CARAVAGGIO, sold for $40 each; a good historical subject, the "Conspiracy of Catiline," copied by MILANI after SALVATOR, realized $130. Dr. PECKHAM bought for $180 a "Madonna and Child," in heavily carved Florentine frame, after RAPHAEL, by ORGAGNA. The statuary was really fine and was worth more than it realized.

Notice of the New-York City Hall.

In reply to a [illegible] inquiry of what authority the property of the New-York City Hall had been advertised for sale at auction on the 5th inst., the Commissioner of Repairs and Supplies said he was to be found yesterday, to communicate explanatory. After explaining some unimportant errors in the printing of the advertisement, the Commissioner stated in justification of his course, that the Superintendent of Lands and Places was anxious to have the same removed, in order to put the grounds in order; that the property was appraised, as it lay, for cash; lastly, that he had consulted with his Honor the Mayor, and that he advised the course he had taken. His whole action, however, he thought justified upon the general laws governing the Department over which he was placed. After some discussion, a resolution, by Alderman WM. TUMBY, was adopted, instructing the Commissioner of Repairs and Supplies to stay all proceedings in relation to disposing of the old materials taken from the roofs of the New-City Hall, until further directed by the Common Council.

History of the Post-Office.

PERRY HELLER, Esq., read a paper before the Geographical and Statistical Society last evening, entitled a "History of the Post-Office." We call a paragraph or two:

Table of estimates of the number of letters drawn through the mails since the year 1790, were produced. The estimates cannot vary from the actual number extent 10%, probably more than 5% or ten per cent. The number in 1790 is given as 885,545; in 1800, about 2,000,000; in 1810, over 7,000,000; in 1820, 18,000,000; in 1830, 52,000,000; and during the last year, 110,884,416. In Great Britain, the year before in a, the number of letters written and sent by mail was 410,000,000. During the 50 years, from 1790 to 1840, the number of letters sent through the mails in the United States, according to our estimates, is 1,500,000,000. During this time the revenue of our Post-Office has increased from 75 to 30,000, and the length of post roads over which the mail is carried, from 1,875 miles to 219,320 miles. The postal revenue in 1790 was $37,935, less than five times the annual salary of the Postmaster General; and during the year 1854, the income from letters alone was over six million dollars. But with all the improvements and rapid strides, there yet remains much to be done. In fact, it is evident that there is something lacking in our postal system, cause good reason, independent of local interests and conflicting population, why our people only use our Post-Office to one-tenth, the usual that the population of Great Britain do theirs.

The following table gives the population, the receipts from postages, the entire local expenditure of post-masters, clerks, letter carriers and receivers, and contingent expenses—all except expenses of transportation—in 30 several places mentioned, in the year 1854, the last column showing the per centage of expenses, or proportion that the Post-Office expenses bear to the receipts.

Places.	Population.	Receipts.	Expenses.	Per ct.
London	2,362,236	$4,641,414	$1,651	$1,678,368 17
Liverpool	375,955	442,797	14,304,642	1,194 37.778
Manchester	316,213	386,049	11,610,624	1,158 32,275
Birmingham	232,841	192,703	10,000,000	36,880 19
Bristol	127,328	148,763	3,000,000	35,790 29
Preston	70,130	33,765	7,000	20
Leicester	60,584	36,496	6,945	22
Limerick	53,440	37,357	4,600	22
Total, the 8 cities	3,610,741	7,484,711	1,203,800	17
Rest of the Kingdom	24,225,799	5,743,012	3,000,000	23
The entire Kingdom	27,836,540	13,150,793	3,333,800	25
New-York	618,547	619,149	120,175	21
Philadelphia	340,045	201,556	68,064	26
Baltimore	169,054	125,581	35,023	28
Boston	136,881	190,943	54,770	29
New-Orleans	116,375	96,300	34,031	35
Cincinnati	115,436	85,423	37,121	43
St. Louis	77,860	49,032	21,220	43
San Francisco	34,776	19,737	65,865	61
Total, the 8 cities	1,508,974	1,473,659	436,466	26
The rest of the U. S.	22,682,922	4,781,027	8,200,046	54
The entire U. S.	23,191,576	6,255,500	9,000,016	49

We see by the above figures that eight of the large cities of Great Britain, containing only 13 per cent. of the population, contribute 56 per cent., or more than one-half of the entire postal income of the kingdom. While the receipts in these cities amount to 56 per cent. the expenses are only 25 per cent. of the entire local postal expenditure. The eight American cities contain 6 per cent. of the population of this country, and contribute 32 per cent. to the postal income, while the expenses are but 16 per cent. of the local post-office expenditure.

The following table gives a different arrangement and different dates. The population is the same, according to the census of 1850; the receipts of the American cities, according to the official report of 1851; the number of letters, according to the report of 1853; and the number of letters, by the office of Great Britain, according to the report of 1852. Reports for all these places could not be obtained for the same year, but the conclusions we arrive at will differ very little in consequence of the difference of dates. The last two columns give the sum of money paid out, the number of letters written by each thousand persons in the average of the population.

In speaking of the great advantage to be derived from the extension of great courtesy at the expense of the Government, and of appropriate "Government Stamps" in aid, he said: "There are more than 18,000 persons employed in the Post-Post-Office of Great Britain, and in the delivery of letters, and of these over 17,000 are letter carriers and letter receivers. Their wages amount to nearly $1,500,000, and yet the profit on local letters in London alone (furnishes two-thirds of the entire sum). Can then be a doubt but the letter carriers and letter receivers in Great Britain are a source of immense profit to the Post-Office Department, aside from the convenience to the public?"

The Suicide of Ziegelhorn.

From the Albany Atlas, April 5.

This unfortunate man died on Tuesday night at the Hospital. Coroner Beam held an inquest yesterday. The following letter, which was taken from his pocket after the fatal shot, reveals the cause for the act:

ALBANY, April 3.

To Mr. Henry Stutter, Editor Freie Blatter, Albany:

DEAR FRIEND—When you will receive these lines, I shall have changed this life for the unknown position of the dead. The change of mind of CAROLINE made life to me intolerable. I have loved, I have left love for work and life, and not being able to live without work continually, it is better that I put an end to life. I am sorry for all those who lose anything by my death, but I could not act otherwise. I was not fit to do anything. Don't judge too harsh of me, for I don't believe that one of all my friends could imagine themselves to be in a like position. For CAROLINE I cannot find any excuse, for I declared to her already a year ago to get married to her, and she never opposed it until a short time ago. My pretended poverty cannot be an excuse for her, because she had a chance to tell me so, and in such a case I could have quieted her fears with respect to the future. Take my most hearty wishes for your future life, and great all my acquaintances, and try to forget your poor friend as soon as possible. I have burned my papers, and so it would be useless to look for them.

R. ZILGENHORN.

ZILGENHORN, as he calls himself, was a native of Dresden, and it was said was nobly connected. To an acquaintance in this city, he two years ago gave his real name as RUDOLPH VAN CONRADSTEIN.

MEDICAL.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE PRESENT AGE.—[illegible] cures in one day. [illegible] cures every time. [illegible] a sovereign remedy.

He has tried his skill in vain, and rather than remove to have years back that disease begun. He has now in his possession testimonials of its virtue, all within 20 miles of Broadway.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a month's case of gonorrhœa.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of gleet.

One to three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of tetter or scurvy.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of syphilis.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and blindness.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure scurvy and ringing in the ears.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Five to six bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula.

Four to six bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula in the glands of the neck.

Remember it always cost more money for one bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

Recollect, I warrant no cure unless the patient is in the vicinity of Boston. I have the effects of it in every case to cure in water with extraordinary dispatch, so you will take every bottle, I have said it will cure for itself. There are two things about this book that cannot be too strongly urged, that it never is my pleasure to meet a more pleasant quite pleasant, and the value known only to those who have tried it in bad; second, that it should cure all kinds of diseases.

In order to give some idea of the matter plain and simple, I will state that in April, 1854, I gave away six bottles per day. In April, 1855, I gave over a thousand bottles per day of it.

No change of diet ever necessary; eat the best you can get and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one table spoonful per day; children over 5 years, a dessert spoonful; infants under 5 to 3 years, one teaspoonful. As no direction can be applicable in all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.

Mr. KENNEDY gives personal attendance in bad cases of Scrofula.

FROM TEXAS.

Up the Rio Grande—Ice Frosts—The Seasons of Atlanta—The Grave of "Bob," &c.

(Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.)

RINGGOLD BARRACKS, TEXAS, Sunday, March 4, 1855.

Once more on the move, "in obedience to the orders of my Government," to use a diplomatic phrase, finding myself for a longer or shorter period at this compulsory country seat. For the first time in my life I have had the opportunity to travel up the Rio Grande in a steamer, and little, indeed, did I find to interest me. Could it be that the country has been discovered hundreds of years ago, and still there be nothing on the river's banks but hens and there a mud-hut, and a few pieces of cleared land that looked like doubtful premises to pay? Why was it—why were there not thriving villages, and church bells, and green fields? Why was the primeval stillness still reigning there? Why were not the things for the stomach in the earth, instead of between the steamer's decks, forwarded by commission merchants over the stormy Gulf? Answer, somebody, who finds in Texas a theme of never-ending beauty—wherein lies the secret of this failure?—for failure it is. Why do the beasts and the birds still reign supreme? The truth is, the secret is not with man, but with his great Maker, whose purposes are unknown to us, but who, it is written, "doeth all things well."

There are enormous bends in the Rio Grande, which exceed in frequency those in the Mississippi. At one place we traveled for three miles, and then came to within forty feet of a point already passed. Just imagine a snake of enormous length, coiled up in fanciful convolutions, and that, stopping on his tail, you follow his back-bone toward his head—imagine this, I say, and you will have an accurate idea of traveling up the Rio Grande in a steamboat. The channel varies constantly; and how our pilot, who was the fortunate possessor of a blinking bride, evaded so many new sand-bars is a mystery even to the initiated. He is a skillful man, and every one interested may be assured that so long as the water lasts, MARVIN will be sure to find the channel. Our Government has recently completed a survey of the river, but should the engineers travel up this way ten years hence, they will be surprised at the freaks of nature, or the finishing touches it will have put on their work. Two or three times a year the floods come with resistless force, making new courses, adding a large slice to the United States from the Mexican side, or giving—back, in fact, altering and amending the "boundary line" as they chose. Against their award there is no appeal; the Mexico-American Republican of to-day may to-morrow find himself a returned subject of his Serene Highness,—house, pigs, dogs and all, moved to the other side of the river. However, not knowing the difference, he would as soon hurrah for SANTA ANNA as for Gen. PIERCE. He has no nationality. All he cares about is to lounge in the sun all day like a mangy dog, and ride ten miles at night to a cock-fight. After three days' sailing we arrived here—distant from Brownsville, by land, 110 miles. Such speed will not astonish the Knickerbockers, whose exploits on the noble Hudson have astonished the wide world.

The post is garrisoned by 1 company of Rifles, 1 of the 4th Artillery, and 8 of the 6th Infantry; all under the command of Col. LOCKE, a loyal soldier and Christian gentleman. It is named after the gallant officer of Light Artillery who fell mangled by a cannon ball at Palo Alto, and who bequeathed to his favorite arm a reputation as undying as his love. He went to Europe to study the different systems; he returned and combined in one harmonious whole the French and English drills, and what has been the result? No nation in the world can excel us in Light Artillery; it turned the tide of battle at Buena Vista, and became the advancement of ZACHARY TAYLOR. After this father of that arm in our service is the poet named. Anything like a description of it is unnecessary; the buildings, like those at all stations in TEXAS, are cheap, scant and crowded.

Within a mile is Rio Grande City, and that's all I choose to say about it. I have neither the desire nor the space to write its history present, and its history past is pretty well known.

Gen. LA VEGA inaugurated his command at Camargo recently, and was called upon, by some of our officers, to pay him ceremoniously after Gen. TWIGGS and Col. MAY. Arriving at Mier, an express bore the news from the Seven Chief, which set him flying toward Matamoras in half an hour. It is supposed that ALVAREZ is pressing the old the hard. Camargo is opposite here, and four miles of fever-rage there terribly last Fall. Out of a population of 3,000, over 600 were swept off in about three months. There was no well defined case of vomito, though the yellow jack was undoubtedly at work in disguise. Yearly the black cloth of death hangs over the South, and no one knows how or where the next blow will strike.

In a neglected spot I found a grave, headed by a rough wooden cross, with the inscription, "Capt. EDWARD DYER, 4th Artillery, March 18, 1850." He was drowned in the Rio Grande. Was this, thought I, the sum as it is the end of his life; to rest here in a secluded spot unnoticed and unknown, for from his heath-stone and those who still gather round it? Did he dream of this with the full life in his veins, and the west of a merry throng? Ah! no, I think not, and, I could not drive out the thought, as I stood over the sunken grave and rude cross marking it, that through the spirit would be no better off with the body unburied. Perhaps my reader will remind "NED," the brilliant but erratic genius, I left the spot half sad, hoping that whether my end shall come in the way appointed by the Almighty, or in the improved wholesome method invented by man, I may, nevertheless, repose among my kindred, where a wife or sister can plant a flower, and no wolf leave his prowling track.

C. L. R.,
First Lieut. 4th Artillery.

Emile de Girardin.

From the Critic, March 1.

EMILE DE GIRARDIN (according to M. JACQUOT) is the illegitimate son of a General of the Empire. No less than six different ladies have been spoken of as his mother, of whom the most illustrious was Madame ADELAIDE, the sister of LOUIS PHILIPPE; but it is generally believed that the real one was the wife of an Envoy to Guiana, who, dreading the effect of an Indian climate, had left her in the still more dangerous atmosphere of Paris. To this aristocratic, thought not very moral parentage, M. DE GIRARDIN owes nothing beyond a very ordinary education; and when he addressed himself to his father with a demand for a name and a condition, he took nothing by his motion but a cold and unfeeling refusal. Up to this time he had been called EMILE DELAMOTHE; but when he became of age, he assumed publicly the name which had been denied him, and called himself EMILE DE GIRARDIN. The law was against him; but those who alone were entitled to invoke the law dared not do so for shame. If his father would not assist him willingly, he was determined that he should do so by compulsion, and, by citing his name openly and without reserve, it proved a charm which resisted him over many obstacles. A successful novel and an appointment to the Inspectorship of Fine Arts brought him into notoriety, and soon afterwards he made his début in the world of journalism as the editor of a periodical, upon which he very shamelessly but very candidly bestowed the name of Le Voleur (The Thief.) The plan of this publication will be more readily understood from the following conversation between its proposer and his partner, M. MAURICE ALHOY:

How shall we pay our contributors? We don't want any. How so? They would be of no use. We will take the best literary articles that appear, and bring them together within the limits of a single frame. That will be our journal.

As the biographer very justly remarks, if there was genius in this, it was the genius of dishonesty; but DE GIRARDIN did not hesitate to sign the prospectuses with his name in full as Inspector of Fine Arts, and even to avail himself of his seat of office in raising all the expenses of postage. At the end of a month the Voleur had ten thousand subscribers, and the despoiled littérati of France were all up in arms against such wholesale robbery. A duel ensued, in which DE GIRARDIN was wounded, and he afterwards found it convenient to retire from the ostensible management of the Voleur, although he continued to enjoy his share of the profits; "for (says the biographer) M. DE GIRARDIN always avoids a scandal, unless it be profitable to him."

The next event in his literary life was the foundation of a journal called the Mode, intended as the opposition to CHARLES X., which the Duchesse DE BERRI, his own sister, was encouraging. This journal had an enormous success; but, soon going too far for the taste of the Duchesse, M. DE GIRARDIN "lost the patronage of her Royal Highness, and gained three thousand additional subscribers." But soon the horizon changed; LOUIS PHILIPPE was in the ascendant, and DE GIRARDIN, a close student of political meteorology, found it convenient to realize his shares both in the Voleur and in the Mode. He saw that the millennium of sixpences and shillings was approaching, and attempted to turn this to his own advantage by drawing up the scheme of a cheap middle-class journal, to be entitled Journal des Connaissances Utiles ("Journal of Useful Knowledge.") With this scheme, and a list of 120,000 subscribers, he presented himself at the office of the Censorship, then under the presidence of CASIMIR PERIER. "That is all very well, M. DE GIRARDIN," said the Minister, with a grave air, "but politics are not useful knowledge, and the people will do very well without them, if you please." To console himself for this disappointment he married Mademoiselle DELPHINE GAY, celebrated alike for her beauty and her wit—a lady who has been compared to SAPPHO and MADDELENE DE SCUDERI, but noticeable for little beyond the publication of a play or two, and a few smart though not very moral novels.

In September, 1833, he founded the Musée des Familles ("Family Museum,") and in advertising this, he invented those monstrous placards which have since been imported into this country and used with such effect whenever the public is to be humbugged in some extraordinary manner. In 1834 he entered the chamber as representative of Bourganeuf. On the 1st of July, 1836, the specimen number of the Presse appeared. Of the motives and principles by which its founder was guided when he conceived the plan of this journal, some notions may be gathered from the following:

Being now on the slippery path of ambition, M. DE GIRARDIN found too many obstacles not to seek some sure support and available means of defence. He thought to find both in a new journal; and certainly he would have attained his end, if the spirit of speculation which possessed him had not led him beyond all bounds. His project was simply to engulf with fons blow the entire periodical press, and to stand alone upon that vast tomb. His coffers were well provided, and he could experimentalize upon the plan which CASIMIR PERIER had refused to sanction. By announcing a daily paper of half the price of the others, and enlarged dimensions, he would carry off all their subscribers, tear their arms from the hands of his enemies, become the monarch of the public, dictate to the sovereign, and obtain that ministerial office which was and is the object of his ambition.

This fine plan naturally aroused a swarm of active enemies; all the other journals were up in arms; and it was out of this dispute that the duel with ARMAND CARREL arose, which terminated so fatally to that soldier-like journalist. This duel attracted a great deal of public odium upon DE GIRARDIN, who, however, was wounded in the encounter, and appears to have acted fairly throughout; though he had the strange taste to appear at the burial of his adversary and pronounce a funeral oration to his memory. This was the last duel fought by M. DE GIRARDIN; and shortly afterwards he submitted to have his ears boxed publicly in the Opera, by M. EMILE PAGES, without seeking any other remedy than that afforded by a Court of law.

His career as a journalist has been signalized by the remarkable consistency with which he has changed his opinions to suit the popular taste. Those who wish for a deeper insight into his character may gather it from the following extracts from M. DE MIRECOURT's biography:

AS EDITOR.

His reign is despotic; with LOUIS XIV. he says: "The Presse, 'tis I." He never allows any remarkable political article to appear without his own signature. Shortly after the revolution of February, ALEXANDER WEIL published two letters, which were loudly praised by the subscribers. A third remained, but the editor refused to print it. WEIL complained, but DE GIRARDIN replied, "My young friend, you have a great deal of talent, but I wish no one to be read in my journal, but myself!"

AS HUSBAND.

Madame DE GIRARDIN shares the illusions of her husband. That tenacious nature has absorbed here. She takes him for an apostle, and believes in him as she believes in God. One day, during the troubles of 1848, she said to General LAURISTON, and others who were with her, "Everything is at its worst, and the country approaches its ruin; no one but he alone can save us." Every one bowed, believing that she spoke of Providence; but she was speaking of her husband, who was writing in his room up stairs.

AS A WRITER.

His method of working is somewhat odd. If he wants any science, he looks it out in Dictionaries and Encyclopedias; if he wants any facts about men, he goes to a nest of pigeon-holes, lettered alphabetically, and containing M. DE GIRARDIN's private notes. Since 1830, no personage of the slightest importance has been without his separate file in that repository. He carefully preserves all documents, letters, law reports, and articles relating to that person. "Where did this terrible fellow find all this?" asks the public, when the editor of the Presse rummages up the past of an enemy, to cast in his face some forgotten sin or unknown turpitude. M. DE GIRARDIN finds it all in his pigeon-holes.

NEW-YORK CITY.

CITY POLITICS.

The Hards and Softs.

The Hard and Soft factions of the Democratic party, through their "Republican General Committees," were in session last night.

The former met at their head-quarters, Stuyvesant Institute, but did nothing of interest.

The Soft Committee met at Tammany Hall and held a secret session of several hours' duration. Alderman ROBERT KELLY in the Chair. Alderman HERRICK, ex-District Attorney SHEPARD, Col. MIKE, the Mayor's Clerk, and other conspicuous members of the party were in attendance. The meeting, we understand, was as unharmonious as protracted. The subject of "Spanish outrages" was brought forward, and gave rise to a long debate. Some of the Committee thought it was time to take "decided measures," and advocated the adoption by the Committee of "strong resolutions" on the matter, even though such resolutions might not coincide with the action of the present Administration. One member thought the Spanish Government "had gone far enough," and thought the allegiance of the Committee to the Party and the Administration was second to that of their duty to the country and the character of the Nation. No resolutions of any kind were adopted, however, the "Conservatives" being in the majority.

The Committee adjourned for two weeks.

Quarterly Report of the Commissioner of Repairs and Supplies.

The Report of the Commissioner of Repairs and Supplies for the months of January, February and March, 1855, was rendered to the Common Council last evening. It gives the following as the amount expended within the months specified in his department:

Amount paid January	$87,226 31
Amount paid February	26,018 03
Amount paid March	29,556 30
Bills paid applicable to the Building Stock Fund during January, February and March	21,170 60
Expenses paid for removing the ruins of the new City Hall	6,007 25
Total	$170,908 60

The report was ordered on file.

Organ Grinders.

Among the epistolary communications yesterday addressed to the Mayor, the following was received:

To the best of Mayors, Mayor Wood:

Seeing that you are doing a wonderful amount of good in this second Sodom, for which a true American people will ever thank you, would you not, while your hand is in, give orders to the Police of the Second Ward to abate a nuisance which is of nightly occurrence, annoying the neighbors very much? I mean that of the organ grinders, who are not satisfied with daylight to murder music, but take the night also, disturbing children and adults from their slumbers. They can be found at all hours, from 7 P. M. to 1 A. M. Now, good Mr. Mayor, try your hand at this, and I, as well as many mothers, will bless you.

A FRIEND OF REFORM,
of the Second Ward.

Dr. Hardenburgh's Church.

Rev. Dr. HARDENBURGH's Church in Twenty-third-street, between Sixth and Seventh-avenues, gives pleasant evidences of general prosperity. Efforts made during this Spring have enabled the Church to cancel its floating debt, leaving the present incumbrances $11,600. A Concert given in the Church on Wednesday evening, in aid of the funds, was successful, and it is hoped that the entire debt now hanging over the Church will soon be liquidated. The edifice is very chaste and elegant; and the interior appointments are worthy of remark for the taste displayed. We understand that the pews are filling up rapidly, at prices ranging from $5 to $30.

Increase of Crime—The Prisons Overflowing.

The Grand Jury came into the Court of Sessions yesterday, to present indictments, when Judge STUART addressed them as follows:

There was never any time, in the history of criminal jurisprudence in this City, when the prisons were so full as now—when so many cases were on bail as now. It is very desirable, in view of the approaching Summer season, that the Court should relieve the prisons. But in order to accomplish that end, it is necessary for the Grand Jury to get through their business as rapidly as they conveniently can. The prisons will be actually overrun and overflowing, unless, gentlemen, you move rapidly during the present session.

The Grand Jury then retired.

Alleged Fugitive Defaulter.

John M. Throck, who formerly held a post of considerable importance in Holmes County, Ohio, was arrested on Wednesday, while on board the steamship Union, which had just arrived from Havre. He stands charged with having decamped with public moneys to the amount of $20,000 or more, and committing several forgeries besides, by way of altering the figures of the tax list, he having been Collector of Taxes of Holmes County. Officer Loveland, of Ohio, some days ago, was sent on for the prisoner, whom he had been informed would arrive in the Union. He had provided himself with the necessary requisition from Gov. Clark, and this morning Throck was conveyed back to Ohio, to await his trial. Previous to these charges being made against the accused his character was without blemish.

Tenth Ward School.

The semi-annual examination of the Male Department of the Tenth Ward School, No. 42, in Allen-street, E. L. AVERY, Principal, was held on Wednesday; 400 boys were present, whose general deportment and intelligence gave satisfaction. The Primary Department of the same school, Mrs. A. HUNT, Principal, has 450 pupils, and was examined on Tuesday.

The Grammar School for girls in the same building was also examined on Tuesday by Messrs. RAYMOND and McKEON in the presence of a large number of school officers and visitors; number of pupils 350.

Two Persons Killed.

Coroner Wilhelm held an inquest at No. 121 East Eleventh-street, on the body of Daniel Egan, who was killed by falling down a flight of stairs while intoxicated. Verdict accordingly. Deceased was aged 45 years, and born in Ireland.... Another inquest was held by the same Coroner upon the body of Alice Mulloon, who died from a severe fracture of the skull produced by falling down stairs. She also was intoxicated.

A Tricky Newsboy.

A newsboy was brought before Justice Connolly yesterday charged with forging a ticket on the office of a Wall-street daily for 307 papers, when his order was made out for only seven. One of the proprietors of the concern appeared in Court to prosecute the charge; but when the Clerk had taken an affidavit of the book-keeper the complaint was withdrawn.

Crystal Palace Market.

The Remonstrance of the Board of Councilmen against a bill organizing certain parties into an Association, converting the Crystal Palace into a Market, was concurred in by the Board of Aldermen last evening.

☞ A lad named O'Keefe was killed yesterday at the foot of Eleventh-street, by the falling of a pile of lumber.

Gas-Dividends—Tell the Whole Story.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

As you have taken up the cudgel in behalf of the gas consumers, I ask permission, through the medium of your columns, to direct the attention of the public to the fact that Mr. CHARLES ROONEY, in his answer to the inquiries of the Legislature, has not thought proper to state the dividends declared by the Manhattan Gas Company for the different years since the Company was formed. He simply states that the Company was incorporated in 1830 and paid its first dividend in 1836, and that the average dividend from 1836 to 1850 has been a fraction over 7 per cent. But he is very careful not to give the dividends for the separate years. I maintain that, in consequence of the enormously increased consumption of gas in this City, the dividends declared by the Directors to the stockholders—for the public never by any chance hears when these dividends are declared, nor what their amount is—have, during the last five years at least, very greatly exceeded 7 per cent. I assert, furthermore, that the quality of the gas varies very much, while its price never changes; that the gas metres are notoriously grossly inaccurate; and that gas can be furnished at a much lower price, and of better quality than at present. Let it be remembered that the gas metres are the property of the Companies, and are manufactured for them if not by them. They have the public completely in their power, and the public suffers, as it always does when there is a monopoly of any one of the necessaries of life. Let the Legislature examine this matter well before granting the petition of the Manhattan Gas Company now under its consideration. Let it insist upon knowing the dividends of the Company for every year since its charter was granted. Let there be created an Inspector of gas, whose duty it shall be to analyze it from time to time, and determine its illuminating power; and an Inspector of gas metres, without whose certificate no metre shall be sold or rented. Then, and not till then, shall we have good and cheap gas.

COURT CALENDAR—FRIDAY.

This being a fast day in all the Christian Churches, the Courts, civil and criminal, stand adjourned.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Campbell.

The Mechanics' Banking Association vs. Kiersted and Everts.—This case was first tried before Hon. Chief Justice Oakley and a Jury, on the 11th day of April, 1854. The case appeared to be this:

The plaintiff complains that on the 16th day of January, 1853, Mr. Kiersted made a promissory note whereby he promised to pay to the order of himself, ninety days after the date thereof, the sum of $300; the payee then endorsed the same to Samuel P. Everts, who endorsed it to the plaintiff in this action. The payment of the note at maturity was demanded of Kiersted and refused. Notice was then given to Samuel P. Everts of the non-payment.

Wherefore the plaintiffs demand judgment in the sum of $300, with interest from the maker and endorser respectively, together with 75 cents protest fee.

The answer of the defendant Kiersted admits the making of the note, but denies that the plaintiff is the lawful holder of it. Mr. Kiersted says that previous to making the note he was petitioned to become a subscriber to a Bank about to be established, called the Morrisania Bank, to be located in the village of Morrisania, in Westchester County. He did subscribe one thousand dollars of the stock. In making the subscription he paid the Bank ten per cent. of the amount of said subscription. It was agreed that he should give his note for the balance, over the ten per cent., and that the note should be held as collateral security for the payment of the sums as they should from time to time become due. No second installment was ever called in. The defendant believes that the note was stolen from a drawer in the Bank. He alleges that the note was received from Saml. P. Everts, with a full knowledge as to these facts.

The defendants did not succeed in proving that the note was stolen from the drawer.

Verdict for the plaintiff. For plaintiff, R. H. Mount, Jr.; for defendants, Willard, Sweeny and Anderson.

WONDERFUL TESTIMONY IN FAVOR OF THE BRANDRETH PILLS.—BRANDRETH'S PILLS cure all diseases by purifying the blood. They are the best purgative known. Dr. JAMES LULL, of Pittsdam, in New-York State, has used them in an extensive practice for seventeen years, and no man living can be more convinced of their efficacy. Dr. LULL will be in New-York, at No. 43 Canal-street, Brandreth Building, by the 15th of April, and may be consulted with reference to the use of those Pills. BRANDRETH'S Pills are of immense importance to the public—the evidence of their usefulness is on every side. Read:

"DR. BRANDRETH—Sir: From my earliest childhood I was subject to bleeding at the nose, dizziness, singing in my ears, and a heavy, dull feeling in my head. Being of a strong and robust habit, the physicians said I had too much blood—that it was too rich, also.

"At the age of 25, the bleeding from my nose not being so frequent as before, they thought it necessary to employ bleeding with the lancet, and leeches to my neck, against the dreadful headaches from which I suffered. It seemed to give me great relief; but in a week or two the same course had to be again practiced. In one year I was bled twenty-three times, and had not less than two hundred leeches applied to my neck and back. I was put upon the use of baths, and a long course of saline medicines was prescribed. This course was pursued for several years, which was doing all the doctors could to break down an originally fine constitution. It is now about four years since I commenced to feel acute pains in my chest, head, limbs, joints, between the shoulders, along the spine and in the throat. During all this season of sickness, my bowels were either bound or in a state of looseness—costiveness generally prevailing. General oppression and sleeplessness came on, I lost my appetite entirely, and began to spit blood. The doctors seemed to do me no good, and, worn out with their treatment, I determined in November last to commence with your Pills. I commenced with four Pills, and continued to take them daily for nearly two months, going up as high as twelve Pills and as low as one. I also several times took the bonset, as prescribed by Dr. JAMES LULL, in his sixteen years' experience with your pills. After the first fifteen doses, the spitting of blood ceased entirely, the pains in my head, joints and chest left me, and my appetite and sleep were in two months entirely restored. In fact, I now feel like a new creature. JAMES LIMMEN.

Thank you, Miss NED—Minnie, this is an extraordinary idea, and one in which you are interested as well as myself. I am going this morning over to Messrs. CHAS. HEARD & Co.'s, No. 301 Grand-street. NEW-JERSEY.

Punishment of Patent Safe Swindlers.

It has been the practice, for many years past, for the New-York swindlers, especially those operating upon the "patent safe game," to resort to Hoboken with their victims, in order to elude the police of New-York. By committing their crime in another State also, they could return to New-York with a better prospect of delaying, if not entirely escaping justice, if detected. To remedy this evil, Hon. D. S. GERNSEY, Jr. has presented a bill in the New-Jersey Legislature, for their severe punishment. The bill has become a law, and any person who is convicted of swindling by such means, may be sentenced to the State Prison for a term of not less than one or more than five years, and to pay not exceeding $1,000.

Law and Order Meeting.

A meeting of those in Jersey City in favor of "Temperance and Law and Order," is called for this evening at the Reformed Dutch Church in Grand-street. The object of the meeting is to promote the chances of the election of those candidates to be voted for on Tuesday next who will discourage liquor selling.

A Tyneside emigrant, writing home from Melbourne, says: On our casting anchor in Hobson's Bay, a newspaper reporter came on board and furnished us with copies of that morning's Argus; and the first thing which caught my eye was a report of a meeting of "the unemployed," which had been held the previous day on Flagstaff Hill, and attended by about 1,500 of the working classes of Melbourne. Very agreeable news, this, to men who had come 16,000 miles in the expectation of selling their labor to advantage!
